QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

I. In Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, 609 (2002) (Ring II), this Court held that the Sixth Amendment entitles an Arizona capital murder defendant to have a jury, rather than a judge, determine the presence of at least one aggravating circumstance that renders the defendant death eligible. Ring II extended to capital cases the holding in Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2002), that the Sixth Amendment jury trial right applies to the determination of a fact that increases the sentencing range for a charged offense. Id.

II. Did the Arizona Supreme Court err by holding that Ring II requires not only a jury determination of an aggravating factor rendering the defendant eligible for the death penalty, but also a jury determination of the existence of mitigating circumstances and whether the mitigating circumstances are sufficiently substantial to warrant leniency?

OPINION BELOW

On June 30, 2003, the Arizona Supreme Court vacated Respondent Arturo Anda Canez's death sentence and remanded the case for resentencing upon finding that Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002) ("Ring II"), requires that a jury determine whether aggravating circumstances outweigh mitigating circumstances. State v. Canez, 74 P.3d 932, ¶¶ 22, 27-28 (Ariz. 2003) ("Canez II"). (Appendix A.)

STATEMENT OF JURISDICTION

Petitioners respectfully request that a writ of certiorari issue to review the decision of the Arizona Supreme Court holding that Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002) ("Ring II"), requires that a jury determine whether aggravating circumstances outweigh mitigating circumstances. State v. Canez, 74 P.3d 932, ¶¶ 22, 27-28 (Ariz. 2003). (Appendix A.)

The Arizona Supreme Court issued its decision on June 30, 2003. Petitioner timely filed the petition for writ of certiorari within 90 days of that decision. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to United States Constitution Article III, Section 2; 28 U.S.C. § 1257(a); and Supreme Court Rule 10.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

The Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides, in relevant part, "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed...."

The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides, in relevant part, "No State shall...deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law...."

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent fatally bludgeoned and stabbed his 77-year-old victim in February, 1996. State v. Canez, 42 P.3d 564 at ¶¶ 2, 9, 13 (Ariz. 2002) ("Canez I"). He entered the victim's home in the middle of the night and killed him for the cash in his wallet, a television, and a stereo system. Id. at ¶¶ 2–13. In February, 1998, a Maricopa County, Arizona jury convicted him of first-degree felony murder, first-degree burglary, and two counts of armed robbery in connection with the events surrounding the murder. Id. at ¶ 15.

The trial court sentenced Respondent to death under the former version of Arizona's capital sentencing statute, section 13–703 of the Arizona Revised Statutes. Canez I, 42 P.3d 564 at ¶ 15. That statute permitted a judge, rather than a jury, to determine whether at least one statutory aggravating circumstance existed under subsection 703(F) of the statute. Upon such a finding, a convicted murderer became eligible for a death sentence.

In this case, the trial court found that four separate aggravating circumstances supported a death sentence. Specifically, the trial court found that Respondent had committed prior serious offenses; that his victim was at least 70 years of age; that Respondent committed the murder for pecuniary gain; and that Respondent committed the murder in an especially cruel, heinous or depraved manner. Canez I, 42 P.3d 564 at ¶¶ 84, 90-91, 99.

On direct appeal, the Arizona Supreme Court affirmed Respondent's murder conviction and death sentence. Canez I, 42 P.3d 564 at ¶ 143. In conducting an independent review of the evidence supporting the death sentence, the Arizona Supreme Court found the State had proven beyond a reasonable doubt that Respondent had committed prior serious offenses; that his victim was at least 70 years of age; that Respondent committed the murder for pecuniary gain; and that Respondent committed the murder in an especially cruel manner. Id. at ¶¶ 90, 97, 99. However, the Arizona Supreme Court did not agree that the State had proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the murder was especially heinous or depraved, and vacated the trial court's finding as to those facts. Id. at ¶ 109. After independently reweighing the aggravating circumstances against the mitigating circumstances, the Arizona Supreme Court upheld the death sentence, stating, "In light of the four statutory aggravating circumstances established beyond a reasonable doubt, the absence of statutory mitigation, and the minimal weight of the non-statutory mitigating circumstances, we independently conclude that the mitigating circumstances are insufficient to call for leniency." Id. at ¶ 126.

This Court decided Ring II before the Arizona Supreme Court's decision became final with the issuance of the mandate. The decision in Ring II prompted the Arizona Supreme Court to consolidate all capital cases in which the direct appeal was not yet final for the purpose of determining whether Ring required reversal or vacatur of the death sentences. In the consolidated proceeding, the court held, among other things, that (i) Sixth Amendment error under Ring could be harmless, (ii) Ring recognizes a Sixth Amendment right to have a jury determine the existence of mitigating circumstances in capital cases, and (iii) Ring recognizes a Sixth Amendment right to have a jury weigh aggravating circumstances against mitigating circumstances to determine whether death is the appropriate sentence. State v. Ring, 65 P.3d 915, ¶¶ 50, 63, 88–89 (2003) ("Ring III") (Appendix B). In light of those conclusions, the Arizona Supreme Court determined that it would examine each of the consolidated cases pending on direct review and apply those holdings to determine whether the Ring error was harmless. Id. at ¶ 104.

In the case below (Canez II), the Arizona Supreme Court applied its holdings in Ring III to Respondent's case and vacated his death sentence. The court examined the Ring error as applied to Respondent and upheld two of the four aggravating circumstances notwithstanding the absence of a jury finding. The court upheld the finding of prior convictions on the ground that such findings are exempt from Ring error. Canez II, 74 P.3d 932 at ¶ 6. The court also upheld the aggravating circumstance under A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(9) (victim at least 70 years old), stating that "the evidence presented concerning the victim's age was overwhelming and uncontroverted," and that the Ring error as to that circumstance was therefore harmless. Canez II, 74 P.3d 932 at ¶ 9. However, the court refused to uphold the aggravating circumstances found under A.R.S. §§ 13-703(F)(5) (pecuniary gain) and (F)(6) (special cruelty), because it could not find beyond a reasonable doubt that every reasonable juror hearing the same evidence would necessarily have found that those circumstances existed. Canez II, 74 P.3d 932 at ¶¶ 12, 16.

The court went on to find, as it has in every post-Ring III case to date, that it could not "conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that no rational trier of fact would determine that the mitigating circumstances were sufficiently substantial to call for leniency." Id. at ¶ 22. Consequently, the court vacated Respondent's death sentence and remanded the case for a jury trial to (i) redetermine whether aggravating circumstances existed under A.R.S. §§ 13-703(F)(5) and (F)(6), and (ii) redetermine whether there was mitigation evidence sufficiently substantial to call for leniency. Id. at ¶ 28.

Petitioner now seeks a writ of certiorari to the Arizona Supreme Court to challenge that court's ruling that the Sixth Amendment, as interpreted in Ring II, affords capital defendants the right to have a jury determine (1) whether more than one aggravating circumstance exists where anyone aggravating circumstance renders the defendant death eligible, and (2) the existence and relative weight of mitigating circumstances.

REASONS WHY THE WRIT SHOULD ISSUE

There is a conflict among the states regarding how to apply Ring II. The Arizona, Nevada, and Colorado Supreme Courts have broadly interpreted Ring II error to include the determination of mitigating circumstances and the weighing and balancing of aggravation and mitigation. That conclusion conflicts with rulings from appellate courts in Delaware, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Alabama, Indiana, and Florida. This Court should accept review to clarify this confusion regarding the application of Ring II.

Ring II does not establish a Sixth Amendment right to have a jury determine whether mitigating circumstances exist and whether mitigation is sufficiently substantial to warrant leniency. In Ring II, this Court noted that the issue presented was very narrow—whether an aggravating factor that makes a defendant death eligible may be found by the judge, or whether the Sixth Amendment's jury trial guarantee applies to that finding. Ring II was based on this Court's decision in Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2002), that the jury trial guarantee extends to any fact that increases the sentencing range. In Arizona, a finding of at least one aggravating circumstance necessarily increases the sentencing range to include a possible death sentence. Thus, a jury finding (or a finding of harmless error) regarding the existence of at least one aggravating circumstance extends the sentencing range to include a possible death sentence and therefore satisfies Ring II.

Finally, the Arizona Supreme Court's ruling affects not only the instant case, but approximately 20 other Arizona cases that were pending on direct review at the time this Court decided Ring II, and that involve uncontroverted and/or overwhelming evidence of at least one aggravating circumstance. This Court should accept review to avert unwarranted resentencing proceedings, with their concomitant costs to the State and to victims, in those cases.

ARGUMENTS

I.

THERE IS A CONFLICT AMONG THE STATES REGARDING WHETHER, UNDER RING V. ARIZONA, THE SIXTH AMENDMENT JURY TRIAL RIGHT IN CAPITAL CASE SENTENCING PROCEEDINGS EXTENDS BEYOND THE RIGHT TO A JURY DETERMINATION OF AN AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE THAT RENDERS THE DEFENDANT ELIGIBLE FOR THE DEATH PENALTY.

State courts have reached conflicting conclusions regarding the scope of Ring II. The Arizona Supreme Court held in the instant case that, under Ring II, there is a Sixth Amendment right to a jury determination of whether mitigating circumstances exist and whether those circumstances are sufficiently substantial to warrant leniency. Canez II, 74 P.3d 932, at ¶ 17. The Colorado Supreme Court recently reached the same conclusion in Woldt v. Colorado, 64 P.3d 256, 265–66 (Col. 2003), as did the Nevada Supreme Court in Johnson v. Nevada, 59 P.3d 450, 460 (Nev. 2002).

In contrast, the Delaware Supreme Court has ruled that Ring II does not extend to the weighing phase of the capital sentencing process; once a jury finds a statutory aggravating circumstance that renders the defendant death eligible, a sentencing judge may weigh aggravating and mitigating circumstances. Brice v. Delaware, 815 A.2d 314, 322 (Del. 2003). The Nebraska Supreme Court has similarly ruled that Ring II does not afford capital defendants the right to have a jury weigh and balance aggravating and mitigating circumstances; those determinations fall outside the jury's "eligibility" decision and instead are part of the "selection decision," which can be performed by a judge without violating the Sixth Amendment. Nebraska v. Gales, 658 N.W.2d 604, 623 (Neb. 2003) ("[W]e interpret Ring as affecting only the narrow issue of whether there is a Sixth Amendment right to have a jury determine the existence of any aggravating circumstance upon which a capital sentence is based.").

Alabama, Oklahoma, Florida, and Indiana courts have similarly rejected the notion that Ring II requires that a jury weigh aggravating and mitigating circumstances. In Ex parte Waldrop, 2002 WL 31630710 (Ala. Nov. 22, 2002) (not yet released for publication), the Supreme Court of Alabama upheld a judicial-override provision in Alabama's capital sentencing scheme that permits a judge to sentence a defendant to death notwithstanding a jury recommendation of life. The Alabama Supreme Court rejected, among other arguments, Waldrop's claim that, under Ring II, the process of deciding whether the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances is a factual finding subject to the Sixth Amendment jury trial guarantee. 2002 WL 31630710, at * 7. See also Ex parte Hodges v. State, 2003 WL 1145451, *6, *7 (Ala. Mar. 14, 2003) (not yet released for publication) (upholding judicial-override provision; because the defendant was eligible for the death penalty when the jury found that he committed the murder while he was engaged in a robbery, the subsequent determination by the trial court that the especially heinous, atrocious, or cruel factor was established and that aggravating circumstances outweighed the mitigating circumstances did not implicate Ring II or Apprendi) (not yet released for publication); State v. Torres, 58 P.3d 214 (Crim. App. Okla. 2002) (rejecting claim that Ring II precludes an appellate court from reweighing the evidence of aggravating and mitigating circumstances after invalidating an aggravating circumstance: "Oklahoma's provision that jurors make the factual finding of an aggravating circumstance beyond a reasonable doubt is all that Ring [II] requires."); Bottoson v. Moore, 833 So.2d 693 (Fla. 2002) (per curiam opinion analyzing effect of Ring II on Florida statutory scheme and denying post-conviction relief based on Ring II; two Justices concurred only because one of the four aggravators found in connection with the murder was Bottoson's prior conviction of a crime involving the threat of violence—an aggravator that need not be found by the jury under Almendarez-Torres); Wrinkles v. State, 776 N.E.2d 905, 907–08 (Ind. 2002) (multiple murders aggravating circumstance implicit in jury's verdict; therefore Ring II is not implicated).

Given the clear conflict in the way state courts have interpreted this Court's Sixth Amendment analysis in Ring II, this Court should accept certiorari review in the instant case to provide guidance and clarity.

II.

THE ARIZONA SUPREME COURT ERRED BY FINDING THAT RING V. ARIZONA ESTABLISHES A SIXTH AMENDMENT RIGHT TO HAVE A JURY ASSESS WHETHER MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES EXIST AND WHETHER THE MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES ARE SUFFICIENT TO WARRANT LENIENCY.

In Ring II, this Court held that Arizona's death penalty sentencing statute offended the Sixth Amendment to the extent it required a judge, rather than a jury, to determine the presence or absence of an aggravating circumstance that renders a first-degree murder defendant eligible for the death penalty. Based on Apprendi's holding that, other than the fact of a prior conviction, any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must be submitted to a jury, this Court overruled Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639 (1990), in which this Court had rejected the same Sixth Amendment challenge to Arizona's statute (A.R.S. § 13–703). Ring II, 536 U.S. at 609.

The Arizona Supreme Court has interpreted Ring II too broadly. This Court's analysis in Ring II focused on whether a finding that an aggravating factor existed increased the range of sentence the defendant faced. See 536 U.S. at 602. The Arizona Supreme Court had indicated in State v. Ring, 25 P.3d 1139, 1151 (Ariz. 2001) (Ring I), that "the death sentence becomes possible only after the trial judge makes a factual finding that at least one aggravating factor is present." (Emphasis added.)

Relying on the Arizona Supreme Court's interpretation of Arizona law, this Court found that Arizona's first-degree murder statute authorized a maximum penalty of death "only in a formal sense." This Court stated:

> A defendant convicted of first-degree murder in Arizona cannot receive a death sentence unless a judge makes the factual determination that a statutory aggravating factor exists. Without that critical finding, the maximum sentence to which the defendant is exposed is life imprisonment, and not the death penalty.
> Based solely on the jury's verdict finding Ring guilty of first-degree felony murder, the maximum punishment he could have received was life imprisonment. This was so because, in Arizona, a "death sentence may not legally be imposed . . . unless at least one aggravating factor is found to exist beyond a reasonable doubt."

536 U.S. at 596 (internal quotes omitted, emphasis added). This Court thus held that "the required finding [of an aggravated circumstance] expose[d] [Ring] to a greater punishment than that authorized by the jury's guilty verdict." 536 U.S. at 604 (quoting Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 494).

Apprendi similarly focused on whether a court could impose a sentence beyond the range authorized by the jury's verdict. Apprendi pled guilty to possession of a firearm for an unlawful purpose, a crime designated in New Jersey's substantive criminal statute as a second-degree offense, punishable under New Jersey's felony sentencing statute by a 5 to 10-year prison term. Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 468–70. The charging instrument made no reference to a third New Jersey statute aimed at hate crime, which enhanced the sentencing range from the second-degree to first-degree level (from 10 to 20 years) upon a finding by the sentencing court (by a preponderance of the evidence) that the defendant committed the crime with a racially biased purpose.

Id. at 469. The New Jersey trial court made such a finding and imposed a 12-year sentence, which two state appellate courts subsequently upheld. Id. at 471.

This Court determined that Apprendi had a constitutional right to a jury finding on the issue of racial bias, and held that enhancement under New Jersey's hate crime statute violated the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial because it effectively convicted Apprendi of a greater, uncharged offense. Id. at 475–76, 494 n.19. Confirming a principle previously set forth in Jones (Nathaniel) v. United States, 526 U.S. 227 (1999), this Court stated:

> Other than the fact of a prior conviction, any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt. . . . "[I]t is unconstitutional for a legislature to remove from the jury the assessment of facts that increase the prescribed range of penalties to which a criminal defendant is exposed."

Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 490 (citing Jones, 526 U.S. at 252–53). This Court was careful to point out, however, that not every factual determination relating to sentencing need be found by a jury:

> We should be clear that nothing in this [common-law] history suggests that it is impermissible for judges to exercise discretion—taking into consideration various factors relating both to offense and offender—in imposing a judgment within the range prescribed by statute. We have often noted that judges in this country have long exercised discretion of this nature in imposing sentence within statutory limits in the individual case. See e.g., Williams v. New York, 337 U.S. 241, 246, 69 S. Ct. 1079, 93 L. Ed. 1337 (1949) . . . .

530 U.S. at 481 (emphasis in original).

In the consolidated proceedings conducted by the Arizona Supreme Court following Ring II, the State argued that the court should uphold capital sentences imposed under Arizona's disapproved, former statute in three circumstances: (1) where the jury implicitly found one aggravating factor, (2) where the trial judge found one factor established by overwhelming and essentially uncontroverted evidence, or (3) where the aggravator was outside the purview of Ring II. Any one of these findings renders the defendant "death eligible" based on the presence of one aggravating factor. The State posited that nothing in Ring II prevents a trial judge from finding additional aggravating circumstances, as well as finding mitigating circumstances and balancing them against the aggravating circumstances.

The Arizona Supreme Court rejected the State's argument. The court acknowledged that "[a] narrow reading of Ring II may permit a judge to decide the existence of additional aggravating factors," but nevertheless concluded that Ring II requires a jury to consider all aggravating factors urged by the State. The Arizona Supreme Court further noted that the death penalty could not have been imposed under the statute in place when Canez was sentenced unless the trial court, acting as the sentencer, concluded that mitigating factors were not sufficiently substantial to call for leniency. The court thus held that an analysis of Ring II error includes a determination of the mitigating circumstances and whether those circumstances outweigh the aggravating circumstances. Ring III, 65 P.3d 915, ¶ 88–89; Canez II, 74 P.3d 932, at ¶17.

The Arizona Supreme Court's expansive reading of Ring II is unwarranted given the narrow scope of the issue addressed in Ring II:

> Ring's claim is tightly delineated: He contends only that the Sixth Amendment required jury findings on the aggravating circumstances asserted against him. No aggravating circumstance related to past convictions in his case; Ring therefore does not challenge Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 118 S.Ct. 1219, 140 L.Ed.2d 350 (1998), which held that the fact of prior conviction may be > found by the judge even if it increases the statutory maximum sentence. He makes no Sixth Amendment claim with respect to mitigating circumstances. See Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 490-491, n. 16, 120 S.Ct. 2348, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000) (noting "the distinction the Court has often recognized between facts in aggravation of punishment and facts in mitigation" (citation omitted)). Nor does he argue that the Sixth Amendment required the jury to make the ultimate determination whether to impose the death penalty. See Proffitt v. Florida, 428 U.S. 242, 252, 96 S.Ct. 2960, 49 L.Ed.2d 913 (1976) (plurality opinion) ("[I]t has never [been] suggested that jury sentencing is constitutionally required."). He does not question the Arizona Supreme Court's authority to reweigh the aggravating and mitigating circumstances after that court struck one aggravator. See Clemons v. Mississippi, 494 U.S. 738, 745, 110 S.Ct. 1441, 108 L.Ed.2d 725 (1990).

536 U.S. at 597 n.4. Furthermore, both Ring II and Apprendi focused exclusively on a Sixth Amendment requirement that the jury make factual findings that set the outer limits of the sentencing range. Neither case established a Sixth Amendment basis for requiring a jury to make the ultimate sentencing decision; such a requirement was urged only by Justice Breyer in a concurring opinion. Ring II, 536 U.S. at 614 (Breyer, J. concurring based on his belief that the Eighth Amendment mandates jury sentencing in capital cases). Thus, when a state court finds that an aggravating circumstance is outside the purview of Ring II, or that Ring II error relating to one aggravating circumstance is harmless, that finding satisfies the Sixth Amendment requirements set forth in Ring II and Apprendi.

In the present case, two of the aggravating circumstances fit those descriptions. One aggravating circumstance found by the trial court, and again by the Arizona Supreme Court on independent review, was that Respondent had four prior convictions for serious offenses. Canez II, 74 P.3d 932, at ¶ 6; Canez I, 42 P.3d 564, at ¶ 84. In the post-Ring II remanded proceedings in this case, the Arizona Supreme Court found that no error arose with regard to use of the prior convictions as an aggravating circumstance. In making that finding, the Arizona Supreme Court cited its earlier decision in Ring III, 65 P.3d 915, at ¶ 55, in which it relied on Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 226-27 (1998), for the proposition that a judge can consider prior convictions to enhance a penalty beyond that authorized by the facts established by the jury's verdict). Canez II, 74 P.3d 932, at ¶ 6. The Arizona Supreme Court also found that Ring II error was harmless with regard to use of the victim's age as an aggravating circumstance because the evidence was uncontested and overwhelming. Canez, 74 P.3d 932, at ¶¶ 7-9; see also Ring III, 65 P.3d 915, ¶¶ 53, 86 (Ring II error in the finding of an aggravating circumstance can be harmless where evidence is uncontested and/or overwhelming). Those correct rulings satisfied Ring II in this case.

However, notwithstanding the lack of Ring error with respect to the aggravating circumstance of prior convictions, or the harmlessness of Ring error with respect to the aggravating circumstance of the victim's advanced age, the Arizona Supreme Court remanded this case for resentencing. The court did so in the mistaken belief that Ring II requires more than a finding of harmless error regarding one aggravating circumstance. Notwithstanding the fact that the sentencing range is already expanded to include a possible death sentence, the court posited that the jurors must determine the existence of every alleged aggravating circumstance. Canez II, 74 P.3d 932, at ¶¶ 12, 16, 27-28. The court also remanded the case for a jury trial in the erroneous belief that Ring II gives capital defendants the right to have a jury determine (i) whether mitigating circumstances exist—even though those circumstances do not render a defendant eligible for a sentence greater than life imprisonment, and (ii) whether the mitigating circumstances are sufficiently substantial to call for leniency. Canez II, 74 P.3d 932, at ¶¶ 17, 20, 22, 27-28. In sum, the Arizona Supreme Court interprets Ring II to extend the Sixth Amendment jury trial guarantee to findings on the existence and weight of mitigation evidence.

This Court's decision in United States v. Harris, 536 U.S. 545 (2002), decided the same day as Ring II, supports the conclusion that the Arizona Supreme Court erred by interpreting Ring II to require more than a finding of harmless error regarding one aggravating circumstance. In Harris, this Court rejected a claim that the Sixth Amendment requires a jury finding of a fact (that the defendant brandished a gun during the commission of the offense) increasing the statutory minimum sentence. 536 U.S. at 554. This Court observed that, unlike a statutory factor that increases the maximum penalty for the defendant's crime, a statutory factor setting a mandatory minimum "ha[s] an effect on the defendant's sentence that is more consistent with traditional understandings about how sentencing factors operate; the required findings constrain, rather than extend, the sentencing judge's discretion." Id. This Court further noted that the brandishing statute "does not authorize the judge to impose 'steeply higher penalties'—or higher penalties at all—once the facts in question are found." Id.

This Court also reiterated its pronouncement in Jones that "[i]t is not, of course, that anyone today would claim that every fact with a bearing on sentencing must be found by a jury; we have resolved that general issue and have no intention of questioning its resolution." Harris, 536 U.S. at 558 (citing Jones, 526 U.S. at 248). This Court then held that "[j]udicial factfinding in the course of selecting a sentence within the authorized range does not implicate the indictment, jury trial, and reasonable-doubt components of the Fifth and Sixth Amendments." Id.

In the present case, findings regarding mitigation likewise operated to "constrain, rather than extend, the sentencing judge's discretion." Once the sentencing range included a possible death sentence based on the presence of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance, there was no Ring II/Apprendi error when the trial or appellate court balanced aggravating and mitigating circumstances. See also Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862 (1983) (holding that in a state where aggravating circumstances serve only to make a defendant eligible for the death penalty and not to determine the punishment, the invalidation of one aggravating circumstance does not necessarily require an appellate court to vacate a death sentence and remand to a jury).

Finally, Ring II error should be narrowly interpreted because it does not go to the fairness or reliability of the sentencing process. The sentencing error in Ring II and in the instant case was that a fair and impartial judge, rather than a fair and impartial jury, determined the existence of aggravating circumstances under A.R.S. § 13–703. The error at issue did not implicate the fundamental fairness of the process, and there is no compelling basis for broadening this Court's holding in Ring II beyond the scope of that decision.

In United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625, 632–34 (2002), this Court noted the injustice that would result by reversing a sentence based on error that "did not seriously affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of judicial proceedings." Such an injustice will occur in the instant case if a resentencing proceeding is required. Given the Arizona Supreme Court's conclusion that no Ring II error arose from the finding of the prior conviction and that the evidence relating to a second aggravating circumstance (victim over age 70) was overwhelming and essentially uncontroverted, there is no inherent unfairness to the defendant in ending the harmless error inquiry there. The real threat to the "fairness, integrity, and public reputation of judicial proceedings" would be to require a resentencing in this case notwithstanding a finding of harmlessness as to aggravating factors that set the outer limits of the sentencing range to include a possible death sentence.

Thus, although the Arizona Supreme Court upheld two of the aggravating circumstances that rendered Respondent eligible for the death penalty, the court vacated Respondent's death sentence. The court did so based expressly and solely on its interpretation of this Court's decision in Ring II as requiring that "we can affirm a capital sentence only if we can conclude beyond a reasonable doubt 'that no rational trier of fact would determine that the mitigating circumstances were sufficiently substantial to call for leniency.'" Canez II, 74 P.3d 792, at ¶ 17 (quoting Ring III, 65 P.3d 915, at ¶ 104).

¶1 Arturo Anda Cañez was sentenced to death under a procedure found unconstitutional in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, 122 S. Ct. 2428 (2002) (Ring II). In Ring II, the Supreme Court held that Arizona's capital sentencing scheme violated the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial. Id. at 609, 122 S. Ct. at 2443. In doing so, the Court held that defendants "are entitled to a jury determination of any fact on which the legislature conditions an increase in their maximum punishment." Id. at 589, 122 S. Ct. at 2432. The Court remanded the case for further proceedings consistent with its decision.

¶2 On remand, we consolidated all cases, including Cañez's, in which the death penalty had been imposed but the mandate had not yet issued from this court to determine whether Ring II required reversal or vacatur of the death sentences. State v. Ring, ___ Ariz. ___, ___, ¶¶ 5-6, 65 P.3d 915, 925 (2003) (Ring III). We concluded that we must review each death sentence imposed in these cases under Arizona's superseded capital sentencing statutes for harmless error. Id. at ___, ¶ 53, 65 P.3d at 936.

¶3 We now consider whether the death sentence imposed on Cañez can stand in light of Ring II and Ring III, as well as the Supreme Court's decision in Atkins v. Virginia, which held that the Eighth Amendment of the United States Constitution poses a constitutional bar to the execution of mentally retarded persons. 536 U.S. 304, 321, 122 S. Ct. 2242, 2252 (2002).

FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

¶4 On February 5, 1998, a jury found Arturo Anda Cañez guilty of felony murder, first degree burglary, and two counts of armed robbery. State v. Cañez, 202 Ariz. 133, 145, ¶ 15, 42 P.3d 564, 576 (2002). Following a sentencing hearing, the trial judge found that the State had proved the following four aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt, rendering Cañez eligible to receive the death sentence: (1) Cañez had been convicted of four prior serious offenses, Ariz. Rev. Stat. ("A.R.S.") § 13-703(F)(2), (H)(1) (Supp. 1996); (2) the victim was at least seventy years old at the time of the crime, id. § 13-703(F)(9); (3) the murder was committed in expectation of pecuniary gain, id. § 13-703(F)(5); and (4) the offense was committed in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner, id. § 13-703(F)(6). Cañez, 202 Ariz. at 157-62, ¶¶ 83-109, 42 P.3d at 588-93. The trial judge found that Cañez failed to prove the statutory mitigating circumstance of significant mental impairment, A.R.S. § 13-703(G)(1), and that "the cumulative effect of all of the mitigation offered by the defendant . . . [was] not sufficiently substantial to call for leniency." Cañez, 202 Ariz. at 162, 165, ¶¶ 111, 125, 42 P.3d at 593, 596. He therefore sentenced Cañez to death. We affirmed Cañez's conviction and death sentence on direct appeal. Id. at 165, ¶ 126, 42 P.3d at 596.

DISCUSSION

A. Ring II Error

¶5 In Ring III, we concluded that judicial fact-finding in the capital sentencing process may constitute harmless error if we can conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that no reasonable jury would fail to find the aggravating circumstance. ___ Ariz. at _, ¶¶ 53, 103, 65 P.3d at 936, 946. We now examine whether the Ring II error was harmless with respect to each of the aggravating circumstances found by the trial judge in Cañez's case.

1. Aggravating Circumstances

a. Prior Serious Convictions

¶6 Arizona law provides that a conviction for a prior serious offense constitutes an aggravating circumstance that renders a defendant eligible to receive the death penalty. A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(2). The trial judge found that the State had proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Cañez had four prior felony convictions. Cañez, 202 Ariz.

at 157, ¶ 84, 42 P.3d at 588. Cañez did not contest that these felonies qualify as serious offenses. Id. ¶ 83. In Ring III, we held that "the Sixth Amendment does not require a jury to determine prior convictions under sections 13-703.F.1 and F.2." ___ Ariz. at ___, ¶ 55, 65 P.3d at 936-37. Accordingly, we affirm the trial judge's finding that the State proved the aggravating circumstance of four prior serious felony convictions.

b. Elderly Victim

¶7 An aggravating circumstance exists if at the time the murder was committed, "the murdered person was . . . seventy years of age or older." A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(9). The trial judge found that the State proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the victim was at least seventy years old at the time the murder was committed. Cañez, 202 Ariz. at 158-59, ¶ 90, 42 P.3d at 589-90.

¶8 In Ring III, we held that Ring II error in the finding of the (F)(9) aggravator will be harmless if (1) the jury also convicted the defendant of an "age-dependent crime committed against the murder victim," Ring III, ___ Ariz. at ___, ¶ 86, 65 P.3d at 942; (2) the defendant stipulated to the victim's age; or (3) overwhelming evidence established the victim's age. Id.

¶9 The jury did not convict Cañez of an age-dependent crime, nor did Cañez stipulate to the victim's age. However, the evidence presented concerning the victim's age was overwhelming and uncontroverted. Cañez neither objected to nor controverted the testimony of the victim's son that the victim was born on June 26, 1918, nor did he contest that the crime was committed on February 22, 1996. This testimony was corroborated by a birth certificate, photographs of the victim's body, and testimony by the coroner that the autopsy results were consistent with the body of a 77-year-old man. Although Cañez objected to the admission of the victim's birth certificate on authentication grounds, that objection was overruled, and Cañez did not present any evidence that controverted the validity of the birth date contained on the document. Based on the foregoing, we conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that no reasonable jury presented with this evidence could fail to find that the victim was more than seventy years old at the time of the crime. Therefore, the trial judge's finding that the State proved the (F)(9) aggravating factor beyond a reasonable doubt is harmless error.

c. Pecuniary Gain

¶10 The commission of an offense "in expectation of the receipt . . . of anything of pecuniary value" is an aggravating circumstance under Arizona law. A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(5). The finding of pecuniary gain "requires more than the jury's conviction of a defendant for first degree murder and robbery or burglary." Ring III, ___ Ariz. at ___, ¶ 78, 65 P.3d at 941. The State must also prove that the expectation of pecuniary gain was a "motive, cause, or impetus for the murder and not merely the result of the murder." Id. ¶ 77 (quoting State v. Kayer, 194 Ariz. 423, 433, ¶ 32, 984 P.2d 31, 41 (1999)). We cannot affirm the trial judge's pecuniary gain finding unless we are convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that no reasonable jury could fail to find that the State proved pecuniary gain beyond a reasonable doubt. Id. ¶ 79.

¶11 The trial judge found that "the offense was motivated by the desire for pecuniary gain," "the objective was the robbery of the victim," and "the death occurred in the course of and in furtherance of the defendant's efforts to obtain the victim's property." Cañez, 202 Ariz. at 159, ¶ 91, 42 P.3d at 590. The judge's findings were primarily based on the pretrial statements and trial testimony of Brian Patterson, a co-defendant, who had entered into a plea agreement with the State in exchange for his testimony. At trial, Patterson alternatively denied the validity of three separate and conflicting prior statements about the events on the night of the murder or stated that he could not recall making them.

¶12 The pecuniary gain finding rested heavily on the trial judge's assessment of Patterson's credibility and a determination of which portions of his testimony were true. We cannot say beyond a reasonable doubt that a reasonable jury considering Patterson's testimony and pretrial statements in the context of determining whether Cañez's expectation of pecuniary gain was a motive, cause, or impetus for the murder, would accord them the same weight or come to the same conclusions as did the trial judge. Therefore, we conclude that the Ring II error as to the (F)(5) aggravating circumstance was not harmless.

d. Especially Heinous, Cruel, or Depraved

¶13 That a murder is committed in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner is an aggravating factor under Arizona law. A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(6). The State must prove only one of these factors to establish the (F)(6) aggravating factor. State v. Gretzler, 135 Ariz. 42, 51, 659 P.2d 1, 10 (1983). The trial judge found the murder especially cruel, as well as heinous or depraved. See Cañez, 202 Ariz. at 160, ¶ 99, 42 P.3d at 591. On direct appeal we affirmed the finding that the murder was especially cruel, but found the evidence insufficient to support the findings of heinousness and depravity. See id. at 161-62, ¶¶ 104-09, 42 P.3d at 592-93. We therefore analyze only the cruelty factor.

¶14 The cruelty factor is established by proof that the manner of death caused the victim to suffer mental and physical anguish, see Gretzler, 135 Ariz. at 51, 659 P.2d at 10, "and the defendant knew or should have known that suffering would occur." State v. Trostle, 191 Ariz. 4, 18, 951 P.2d 869, 883 (1997) (citations omitted).

¶15 The trial judge based his cruelty finding on evidence that the victim was conscious when Cañez first stabbed him and remained at least partially conscious through the attempted strangulation and beating. Cañez argued that the evidence did not establish that the victim remained conscious during the attack. Indeed, the medical examiner testified that she could not determine the order in which the injuries were inflicted and that any of the ten blunt force injuries to the head could have resulted in immediate unconsciousness. We cannot say beyond a reasonable doubt that a reasonable jury hearing this evidence would necessarily conclude that the victim remained partially conscious after the initial attack and therefore find the murder was cruel.

¶16 Because we cannot say, beyond a reasonable doubt, that a reasonable jury hearing the evidence would find that the murder was especially cruel, we conclude that the Ring II error was not harmless with respect to the (F)(6) aggravating factor.

2. Mitigating Circumstances

¶17 Our harmless error inquiry does not end with an examination of the aggravating circumstances. Because we can affirm a capital sentence only if we can conclude beyond a reasonable doubt "that no rational trier of fact would determine that the mitigating circumstances were sufficiently substantial to call for leniency," we must also consider whether reversible error occurred with respect to the mitigating circumstances. Ring III, ___ Ariz. at ___, ¶ 104, 65 P.3d at 946.

a. Statutory Mitigation

¶18 It is a statutory mitigating factor that a "defendant's capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired." A.R.S. § 13-703(G)(1). Cañez sought to establish the (G)(1) factor by demonstrating that he was mentally retarded, was on medication for seizures, suffered a depressive disorder, exhibited symptoms of brain damage, was a drug addict, and was intoxicated at the time of the offense. Cañez, 202 Ariz. at 162, ¶ 111, 42 P.3d at 593.

¶19 Cañez presented evidence that his full-scale IQ was 70, placing him on the borderline of mental retardation. However, three psychological experts offered conflicting testimony concerning Cañez's adaptive abilities. Cañez's first expert, Dr. Tatro, testified that Cañez had "borderline personality disorder with antisocial features, intermittent explosive personality disorder, depressive disorder recurrent, and possible organic brain syndrome." Id. at 163, ¶ 113, 42 P.3d at 594. Cañez's second expert, Dr. Blackwood, found some indication of organic brain damage, but suggested that Cañez may not have been trying to do well on the tests. Id. The State's expert, Dr. Youngjohn, testified that he found no evidence of mental illness or brain damage, but diagnosed antisocial personality disorder and psychopathic personality disorder. Id. The trial judge accorded more weight to the State's expert and concluded that Cañez failed to prove he was significantly impaired for purposes of mitigation. Id. ¶ 114.

¶20 On direct appeal, we noted that the evidence of brain damage, mental illness, and retardation was conflicting. Id. ¶ 113. Nevertheless, we upheld the trial court's finding that Cañez failed to establish the (G)(1) factor because we accorded great deference to the trial judge's conclusions concerning the weight to be given to the various expert testimony. Id. ¶ 114. Because this finding rests so heavily on the trial judge's assessment of witness credibility, we cannot say beyond a reasonable doubt that a reasonable jury would necessarily also conclude that Cañez failed to establish by a preponderance of the evidence the (G)(1) statutory mitigator.

b. Non-Statutory Mitigation

¶21 Cañez offered evidence on several non-statutory mitigating factors at the sentencing hearing. Id. at 163-65, ¶¶ 115-25, 42 P.3d at 594-96. The trial judge found, and we affirmed on direct appeal, that Cañez had proved by a preponderance of the evidence the following non-statutory mitigating factors: drug and alcohol use, felony murder, his love of family, and mental illness or impairment. Id. at 163-64, ¶¶ 116-17, 120-22, 42 P.3d at 594-95. The trial judge also found, and we affirmed, that Cañez failed to prove the non-statutory mitigating factors of good character, traumatic childhood and dysfunctional family, and disparate sentence of a co-defendant. Id. at 164-65, ¶¶ 118-19, 124, 42 P.3d at 595-96. We also concluded that the cumulative effect of all the mitigation was not sufficiently substantial to call for leniency. Id. at 165, ¶ 126, 42 P.3d at 596.

¶22 After reviewing the evidence, we cannot say beyond a reasonable doubt that a reasonable jury would not have found that Cañez proved some of the mitigating factors that the trial judge found were not proven. Furthermore, we cannot say beyond a reasonable doubt that a reasonable jury would not have weighed differently the aggravating or mitigating factors that were found or determined that the mitigating factors were "sufficiently substantial to call for leniency." A.R.S. § 13-703(E). Therefore, we conclude that the Ring II error was not harmless in this case. Accordingly, for this reason as well, we vacate Cañez's death sentence because of the Ring II error and remand for resentencing as discussed more fully below.

B. Mental Retardation as an Absolute Bar to Execution

¶23 Our inquiry is not yet complete. While Cañez's case remained on direct appeal, the Supreme Court announced that the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution "'places a substantive restriction on the State's power to take the life' of a mentally retarded offender." Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 321, 122 S. Ct. 2242, 2252 (2002) (quoting Ford v. Wainright, 477 U.S. 399, 405, 106 S. Ct. 2595, 2599 (1986)). Furthermore, in 2001, shortly before the decision in Atkins was announced, the Arizona legislature enacted a statute barring the imposition of the death sentence on mentally retarded persons.[1] A.R.S. § 13-703.02 (Supp. 2002). We now consider the impact of these events on Cañez's case.

¶24 In Atkins, the Court gave some guidance regarding how to determine whether a defendant has mental retardation. The Court noted that "clinical definitions of mental retardation require not only subaverage intellectual functioning, but also significant limitations in adaptive skills such as communication, self-care, and self-direction that became manifest before age 18." Atkins, 536 U.S. at 318, 122 S. Ct. at

1. We note that as originally written, § 13-703.02 applied only prospectively to cases in which the State filed its notice of intent to seek the death penalty after the effective date of the statute. However, the statute was amended in 2002 to apply to all capital sentencing proceedings, including resentencing proceedings. See A.R.S. § 13-703.02(J); 2002 Ariz. Sess. Laws 5th Spec. Sess., ch. 1, § 4.

2250. An IQ below 70-75 indicates subaverage intellectual functioning. Id. at 309 nn.3 & 5, 122 S. Ct. at 2245 nn.3 & 5.

¶25 We addressed the application of the standards set forth in Atkins to our death penalty cases in State v. Grell, ___ Ariz. ___, 66 P.3d 1234 (2003). Like Cañez, Grell was sentenced to death after the trial judge found that he had failed to establish that he had mental retardation. Id. at ___, ¶ 27, 66 P.3d at 1238. We noted in Grell that because Grell was sentenced before the Supreme Court's decision in Atkins, the trial judge had considered the mental retardation evidence from the perspective that such evidence might establish a statutory mitigating factor calling for leniency in sentencing, not from the perspective that such evidence might establish an absolute bar to execution. Id. at ___, ¶ 37, 66 P.3d at 1240. We concluded that the Atkins decision prohibiting the execution of mentally retarded offenders as well as Arizona's new statute barring the imposition of the death penalty on mentally retarded offenders had "so changed the landscape of death penalty jurisprudence that the trial court simply could not have applied the correct principles during sentencing." Id. ¶¶ 37-38. As a consequence, we held that due process required that Grell's case be remanded for an Atkins hearing to determine whether Grell has mental retardation. See id. ¶ 41.

¶26 As discussed above, the evidence presented at Cañez's sentencing established that his full-scale IQ was 70, placing him squarely within Atkins' definition of subaverage intellectual functioning.[2] Additional evidence established that Cañez attended special education classes during grade school, demonstrating that any subaverage mental abilities may have manifested before age 18. Most important, however, is the fact that the evidence concerning Cañez's

2. The Arizona legislature has adopted a definition of mental retardation very similar to that set forth in the DSM-IV, which requires proof of "(1) significantly subaverage intellectual functioning (IQ of 70 or below), (2) concurrent deficits or impairments in present adaptive functioning in at least two of eleven areas, and (3) onset before the age of 18." Grell, ___ Ariz. at ___, ¶ 30, 66 P.3d at 1239 (describing application of the DSM-IV) (footnote omitted); A.R.S. § 13-703.02(K).

mental abilities was considered only from the viewpoint of establishing mitigation, not as a potential bar to execution.

¶27 Due process demands that Cañez receive a hearing at which the court considers the mental retardation evidence under the constitutional principles announced in Atkins and the statutory standards set forth in A.R.S. § 13-703.02. We remand to the trial court to determine whether Cañez has mental retardation and therefore is ineligible to receive the death penalty. In making this determination, the trial court should follow the principles announced in Atkins and the procedures set forth in A.R.S. § 13-703.02, to the extent possible given the post-trial posture of this case. If the court determines that Cañez has mental retardation, the court shall resentence Cañez to life or natural life in prison. See id. § 13-703.02(A). If the court determines that Cañez does not have mental retardation, the court shall conduct a resentencing hearing before a jury, according to the procedures set forth in A.R.S. § 13-703.01 (Supp. 2002).

CONCLUSION

¶28 We vacate Cañez's death sentence and remand this case for resentencing and for a determination of whether Cañez has mental retardation and is therefore ineligible for the death penalty. If the court determines that Cañez suffers from mental retardation, the court shall enter a lawful sentence pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 13-703 to -703.02. If the court determines that Cañez does not have mental retardation, the court shall conduct a jury resentencing pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 13-703 to -703.01.

J O N E S, C.J., concurring in part, dissenting in part:

¶29 I concur in Section B of the opinion and the result, but respectfully dissent from the majority's conclusion that harmless error analysis is appropriate where sentencing determinations are made by the trial judge in the absence of the jury. The right to trial by an impartial jury is fundamental. The sentencing phase is, of itself, a life or death matter. Where a judge, not a jury, determines all questions pertaining to sentencing, I believe a violation of the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States has occurred. In the aftermath of the Supreme Court's decision in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, 122 S. Ct. 2428 (2002) (Ring II), the absence of the jury in the sentencing phase of a capital trial necessarily amounts to structural error. I would remand the case for resentencing, simply on the basis of the Sixth Amendment violation. See State v. Ring, ___ Ariz. ___, ___ ¶¶ 105-14, 65 P.3d 915, 946-48 (2003) (Feldman, J., concurring in part, dissenting in part) (Ring III).

¶1 This case comes to us on remand from the United States Supreme Court, Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, ___, 122 S. Ct. 2428, 2443 (2002) (Ring II). We have jurisdiction pursuant to the Arizona Constitution, Article VI, Section 5.3.

I.
Facts and Procedural History.

¶2 On December 6, 1996, a jury convicted Timothy Stuart Ring of first degree murder, conspiracy to commit armed robbery, armed robbery, burglary and theft. Under Arizona law at the time of Ring's sentencing, capital sentencing followed the procedure set forth at Arizona Revised Statutes (A.R.S.) section 13-703 (Supp. 1996). As required by A.R.S. section 13-703.B, the trial court conducted a sentencing hearing to consider aggravating and mitigating circumstances. The court could consider only those aggravating factors identified by statute, but could consider any possible mitigating factor.[1] A.R.S. § 13-703.F–.G, amended by 2002 Ariz. Sess. Laws, 5th Spec. Sess., ch. 1, § 1. After the hearing, the court found two aggravating factors: Ring committed the murder for pecuniary gain, A.R.S. section 13-703.F.5, and "in an especially heinous, cruel or depraved manner," A.R.S. section 13-703.F.6. State v. Ring, 200 Ariz. 267, 272 ¶ 13, 25 P.3d 1139, 1144 (2001) (Ring I). The trial court concluded that the mitigating circumstance of Ring's minimal criminal record was not "sufficiently substantial to call for leniency" and sentenced Ring to death. Id. at 273 ¶ 13, 25 P.3d at 1145; see A.R.S. § 13-703.E, amended by 2002 Ariz. Sess. Laws, 5th Spec. Sess., ch. 1, § 1.

¶3 Ring subsequently filed a direct appeal to this court seeking review of multiple trial and sentencing issues, including a Sixth Amendment challenge to Arizona's capital sentencing procedure. The Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial, Ring argued, requires a jury, rather than a judge, to find the aggravating factors set forth at section 13-703.F. Ring I, 200 Ariz. at 278 ¶ 40, 25 P.3d at 1150. This court affirmed Ring's first degree murder conviction and death sentence. Id. at 284 ¶ 65, 25 P.3d at 1156. Guided by the United States Supreme Court's decision in Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639, 110 S. Ct. 3047 (1990), we held Arizona's capital sentencing procedure did not violate the Sixth Amendment of the United States Constitution. Ring I, 200 Ariz. at 279-80 ¶ 44, 25 P.3d at 1151-52.

[1] The state must prove aggravating factors beyond a reasonable doubt. A.R.S. § 13-703.B (Supp. 2002); State v. Spreitz, 190 Ariz. 129, 147, 945 P.2d 1260, 1278 (1997). Mitigating factors must be proved by a preponderance of the evidence. A.R.S. § 13-703.C; State v. Pandeli, 200 Ariz. 365, 376 ¶ 44, 26 P.3d 1136, 1147 (2001). Except for one brief period, aggravating circumstances have been codified at A.R.S. section 13-703.F since the legislature enacted judge-based sentencing. Following the 2001 Arizona Legislative Session, these aggravating circumstances are listed under A.R.S. section 13-703.G. 2001 Ariz. Sess. Laws ch. 260, § 1. The legislature redesignated aggravating circumstances under subsection .F in its post-Ring II amendments. 2002 Ariz. Sess. Laws, 5th Spec. Sess., ch. 1, § 1.

¶4 Ring petitioned the United States Supreme Court to accept certiorari. The Court granted review and held that Arizona's capital sentencing scheme violated the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial, overruling Walton and applying the approach of Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 120 S. Ct. 2348 (2000). Ring II, 536 U.S. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 2443. The Supreme Court remanded the matter for disposition in light of Ring II.

¶5 At the time of the Ring II decision, thirty-one defendants sentenced to death had matters pending on direct appeal before this court. On June 27, 2002, we entered an order consolidating all thirty-one death penalty cases then on direct appeal. State v. Ring, Order No. CR-97-0428-AP (June 27, 2002).

¶6 All defendants in this consolidated case either pled guilty to or were convicted by a jury of first degree premeditated or felony murder. Trial judges sentenced all defendants to death under a now-superseded version of A.R.S. section 13-703, under which a judge considered aggravating and mitigating evidence. This court must now examine the impact of Ring II on the death sentences of those defendants before us. To assist the court, and after consultation with counsel for the State and the defendants, we ordered the parties to brief the issues discussed below. We reserved to each defendant the right to further brief sentencing issues, if necessary. This opinion addresses those issues raised in the consolidated appeal. The court will address each defendant's sentencing issues in a separate opinion.

II.

Historical Overview of Capital Punishment in Arizona.

¶7 Under Arizona's first penal code, a person convicted of first degree murder received either a death or prison sentence.[2] Revised

[2] In addition to first degree murder, offenses punishable by death included treason, Revised Statutes of Arizona, Penal Code section 33 (1913), train robbery, id.

Statutes of Arizona, Penal Code § 173 (1913). The jury, exercising its discretion, decided which punishment to impose. Id. In 1918, voters approved an initiative measure giving the trial judge authority to sentence a person to death for first degree murder in cases in which the defendant pled guilty. 1919 Ariz. Sess. Laws, Initiative & Referendum Measures 17, 18. In those cases, the trial court exercised the same discretion as did a jury. Thus, until the early 1970s, Arizona imposed the death penalty for first degree murder at the sole discretion of the jury or court. E.g., Ariz. Code § 43-2903 (1939); Ariz. Code § 4585 (1928); State v. McGee, 91 Ariz. 101, 111-12, 370 P.2d 261, 268 (1962) ("The determination of punishment is wholly within the discretion of the jury upon their consideration of all aspects of the case."), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Lopez, 163 Ariz. 108, 115, 786 P.2d 959, 966 (1990); Hernandez v. State, 43 Ariz. 424, 429, 32 P.2d 18, 20 (1934) ("[T]he question of punishment in first degree murder cases is wholly within the jury's discretion . .. ."). No statutory standards guided the determination of punishment.

¶8 In 1972, however, the United States Supreme Court decided Furman v. Georgia and held that standardless death sentencing procedures violate the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment. 408 U.S. 238, 239-40, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 2727 (1972) (per curiam). According to Justice Stewart, complete jury discretion led to arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death sentence; given strikingly similar crimes, some defendants received a death sentence and others did not. Id. at 309-10, 92 S. Ct. at 2762 (Stewart, J., concurring).

¶9 Following the Furman decision, the Arizona Legislature enacted a new capital sentencing scheme. 1973 Ariz. Sess. Laws ch. 138. The legislation divided a capital first degree murder trial into two phases: a guilt phase and a sentencing phase. Upon a jury conviction of or a guilty plea to first degree murder, the statutes required the trial court to sections 435, 438, and deadly assault by a felon serving a life sentence, id. section 220.

hold a sentencing hearing at which the state and defendant presented evidence of statutorily defined aggravating and mitigating factors.[3] Id. § 5. The trial court could impose the death sentence if it found at least one aggravating circumstance and "no mitigating circumstances sufficiently substantial to call for leniency." Id.

¶10 Three years later, in Gregg v. Georgia, the Supreme Court upheld Georgia's revised sentencing scheme against a claim that the death penalty was per se unconstitutional. 428 U.S. 153, 169, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 2923 (1976). The Georgia statute resembled Arizona's, except that, under Georgia law, the same jury heard both the guilt and sentencing phases. See id. at 164 & n.9, 96 S. Ct. at 2921 & n.9.

¶11 The Supreme Court reviewed Arizona's judge-only sentencing in Walton. The Court rejected an argument that the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial required a jury, not a judge, to find the facts presented at the sentencing hearing. Walton, 497 U.S. at 649, 110 S. Ct. at 3055. In Apprendi, a non-capital case decided ten years later, the Court held that "[o]ther than the fact of a prior conviction, any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt." 530 U.S. at 490, 120 S. Ct. at 2362-63. Although Justice O'Connor's Apprendi dissent questioned whether Walton could survive the Apprendi ruling, id. at 537, 120 S. Ct. at 2387-88 (O'Connor, J., dissenting), the majority distinguished capital cases as "not controlling" authority. Id. at 496-97, 120 S. Ct. at 2366.

¶12 Finaly, in Ring II, the Supreme Court expressly overruled Walton in favor of Apprendi's Sixth Amendment approach. 536 U.S.

[3] In 1978, the Supreme Court held unconstitutional those death penalty sentencing statutes limiting the types of mitigating evidence a defendant can introduce. Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 604, 98 S. Ct. 2954, 2964-65 (1978); Bell v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 637, 642, 98 S. Ct. 2977, 2980-81 (1978). This court subsequently held unconstitutional Arizona's exclusion of nonstatutory mitigating circumstances. State v. Watson, 120 Ariz. 441, 445, 586 P.2d 1253, 1257 (1978). In 1979, the Arizona Legislature amended the mitigating circumstances statute to conform with these decisions. 1979 Ariz. Sess. Laws ch. 144, § 1.

at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 2443. According to the Court, "[b]ecause Arizona's enumerated aggravating factors operate as the functional equivalent of an element of a greater offense, the Sixth Amendment requires that they be found by a jury." Id. (quoting Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 494 n.19, 120 S. Ct. at 2365 n.19). "Capital defendants, no less than non-capital defendants," the Court concluded, "are entitled to a jury determination of any fact on which the legislature conditions an increase in their maximum punishment." Id. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 2432. Thus, any fact necessary to enhance the defendant's sentence beyond that authorized by the jury's guilty verdict must be found by the jury.

¶13 Following the Supreme Court's announcement of the Ring II decision, Governor Jane Dee Hull called a special legislative session to revise Arizona's capital sentencing provisions. On August 1, 2002, the legislature passed and Governor Hull signed into law Senate Bill ("S.B.") 1001, containing several revisions intended to conform Arizona law to the Ring II mandate. S.B. 1001, 45th Leg., 5th Spec. Sess. (Ariz. 2002). Under Arizona's amended sentencing procedure, the jury serving during the guilt phase of the trial also serves as the trier of fact during the sentencing phase. A.R.S. § 13-703.01.C–.D (Supp. 2002). Specifically, the jury will find and consider the effect of aggravating and mitigating circumstances and decide whether the defendant should receive a sentence of death. Id. § 13-703.01.D.

¶14 To determine whether we should vacate defendants' death sentences and either reduce to a life sentence or remand for resentencing under Arizona's revised procedure, we consider the following issues.

III.

Does the Ex Post Facto Clause Prohibit Resentencing Under Arizona's Amended Capital Sentencing Procedure?

¶15 The defendants argue that resentencing under A.R.S. sections 13-703 and 13-703.01 (Supp. 2002) (the new sentencing statutes) would constitute an ex post facto violation under the United States Constitution, Article I, Section 10, Clause 1, and the Arizona Constitution, Article II, Section 25. We disagree.[4]

¶16 The ex post facto doctrine prohibits a state from "retroactively alter[ing] the definition of crimes or increas[ing] the punishment for criminal acts." Collins v. Youngblood, 497 U.S. 37, 43, 110 S. Ct. 2715, 2719 (1990). In Dobbert v. Florida, the Supreme Court held that ex post facto prohibitions reach only those legislative enactments that affect substantive criminal law. 432 U.S. 282, 292, 97 S. Ct. 2290, 2298 (1977). Likewise, we recently held that, under the United States and Arizona Constitutions, "[a]n ex post facto law is one that increases the punishment or aggravates any crime previously committed." Zuther v. State, 199 Ariz. 104, 111 ¶ 26, 14 P.3d 295, 302 (2000) (holding legislative amendment changing statutory computation of prisoner "gate money" not an ex post facto law because legislative purpose was not punitive).

¶17 In Dobbert, the Supreme Court restated the categories of laws constituting substantive changes to criminal law:

> [A]ny statute which punishes as a crime an act previously committed, which was innocent when done; which makes more burdensome the punishment for a crime, after its commission, or which deprives one charged with crime of any defense available according to law at the time when the act was committed, is prohibited as ex post facto.

432 U.S. at 292, 97 S. Ct. at 2298 (quoting Beazell v. Ohio, 269 U.S. 167, 169-70, 46 S. Ct. 68, 68 (1925)). Thus, a legislative act affecting changes in criminal procedure, including procedural changes that disadvantage a defendant, generally does not violate the Ex Post Facto Clause. Collins, 497 U.S. at 45, 110 S. Ct. at 2720 ("[Procedural] refers to changes in the procedures by which a criminal case is adjudicated, as opposed to changes in the substantive law of crimes."); State v. Mendoza, 170 Ariz. 184, 193, 823 P.2d 51, 60 (1992) ("A defendant has no vested right in any particular mode of procedure.").

[4] In State v. Noble, we held that we will interpret the state Ex Post Facto Clause in accord with federal precedent. 171 Ariz. 171, 173, 829 P.2d 1217, 1219 (1992). We find no reason to deviate from Noble.

¶18 The question before us, then, is whether Arizona's new sentencing statutes worked a substantive or procedural change in the law as it existed when these murders took place. We regard three decisions as particularly instructive.

¶19 In Dobbert, the defendant argued that his death sentence violated the Ex Post Facto Clause. Dobbert killed his children in 1972. At that time, Florida mandated a death sentence for capital felony convictions unless the jury, in its discretion, recommended mercy to the judge. Dobbert, 432 U.S. at 287, 97 S. Ct. at 2295. Shortly after Dobbert murdered his children, the Supreme Court decided Furman v. Georgia, striking down the Georgia death sentencing statute as unconstitutional.

Id. at 288, 97 S. Ct. at 2296. A month later, in Donaldson v. Sack, the Florida Supreme Court held the Florida death sentencing statute unconstitutional under Furman. 265 So. 2d 499, 501 (Fla. 1972). Later that year, the Florida Legislature amended the state's capital sentencing procedure to comply with Furman and Donaldson. Dobbert, 432 U.S. at 288, 97 S. Ct. at 2296. Dobbert was then tried and sentenced to death under the state's new law. Id. at 284, 97 S. Ct. at 2294.

¶20 Dobbert failed to persuade the Supreme Court that sentencing him under the amended procedures violated the Ex Post Facto Clause. The Court first limited ex post facto violations to those occurring when a statute makes criminal a previously innocent act, aggravates a crime previously committed, provides greater punishment, or changes the quantum of proof needed to convict a defendant. Id. at 292, 97 S. Ct. at 2298 (quoting Beazell, 269 U.S. at 169-70, 46 S. Ct. at 68). None of those categories applied to the Florida statute. Instead, the Court concluded, the statutory change between the two sentencing methods was "clearly procedural," and "[t]he new statute simply altered the methods employed in determining whether the death penalty was to be imposed; there was no change in the quantum of punishment attached to the crime." Id. at 293-94, 97 S. Ct. at 2298.

¶21 The Supreme Court also rejected an Ex Post Facto Clause challenge in Collins v. Youngblood, a non-death penalty case. The jury had imposed a prison sentence and a fine, the latter not authorized by law. 497 U.S. at 39, 110 S. Ct. at 2717. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reformed the sentence under a statute enacted after the defendant's criminal act took place. Id. at 40, 110 S. Ct. at 2718. The Supreme Court held that applying the sentence reform statute in the defendant's case did not violate the Ex Post Facto Clause because although the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial is substantial, "it is not a right that has anything to do with the definition of crimes, defenses, or punishments." Id. at 51-52, 110 S. Ct. at 2724 (overruling Thompson v. Utah, 170 U.S. 343, 18 S. Ct. 620 (1898)).

¶22 In State v. Correll, in contrast, we found a violation of the Ex Post Facto Clause. 148 Ariz. 468, 482, 715 P.2d 721, 735 (1986), rev'd in part on other grounds by Correll v. Stewart, 137 F.3d 1404 (9th Cir. 1998). A jury convicted the defendant of three counts of first degree murder. After the murders, but before sentencing, the legislature amended A.R.S. section 13-703.F to add multiple homicide convictions as an aggravating circumstance. We held that retroactively applying the new aggravating circumstance constituted a substantive change to capital murder and disadvantaged the defendant. Id. This change affected the substantive nature of the crime and sentencing by adding a new element that, if present, permitted the defendant to receive a more severe punishment than that available at the time of the crime.[5]

¶23 These cases clearly indicate not only that ex post facto principles generally do not bar applying procedural changes to criminal proceedings, but also that the general framework of a state's statutory capital sentencing scheme is procedural in nature. As Collins established, rights secured by the Sixth Amendment jury trial right, the right at issue here, are inherently procedural. 497 U.S. at 51, 110 S. Ct. at 2724. Under the holding of Dobbert, Arizona's change in the statutory method for imposing capital punishment is clearly procedural: The new sentencing statutes alter the method used to determine whether the death penalty will be imposed but make no change to the punishment attached to first degree murder. The new sentencing statutes added no new element, or functional equivalent of an element, to first degree murder.[6] Correll, 148 Ariz. at 481-82, 715 P.2d at 734-35. Hence, the changes to the state's capital sentencing procedures do not resemble the type of after-the-fact legislative evil contemplated by contemporary understandings of the ex post facto doctrine.

[5] The Supreme Court's holding that aggravating factors serve as the functional equivalent of elements of the first degree murder offense makes this conclusion even more evident. Ring II, 536 U.S. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 2443.

¶24 Even a procedural change amounts to an ex post facto violation, however, when it affects "matters of substance, by depriving a defendant of substantial protections with which the existing law surrounds the person accused of crime, or arbitrarily infringing upon substantial personal rights." Collins, 497 U.S. at 45, 110 S. Ct. at 2720 (quoting Beazell, 269 U.S. at 171, 46 S. Ct. at 69; Malloy v. South Carolina, 237 U.S. 180, 183, 35 S. Ct. 507, 508 (1915); and Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U.S. 377, 382-83, 14 S. Ct. 570, 572 (1894)) (internal quotation marks omitted). The change involved here does not affect the substantive matters of the defendants' prosecutions. See id. Under the new sentencing statutes, to obtain a death sentence, the state must prove the same aggravating circumstances required by the former statute and must prove them beyond a reasonable doubt. The only difference is that a jury, rather than a judge, decides whether the state has proved its case. The new sentencing statutes do not place the defendants in jeopardy of any greater punishment than that already imposed under the superseded statutes. Accordingly, applying the new sentencing statutes does not violate the federal or state Ex Post Facto Clause.

IV.

Does the Double Jeopardy Clause Prohibit Resentencing Under Arizona's Amended Capital Sentencing Procedure?

¶25 The defendants argue that the double jeopardy provisions of the United States and Arizona Constitutions[7] preclude resentencing under the new sentencing statutes. We hold that they do not.

¶26 Double jeopardy prevents the government from prosecuting an individual more than once for the same offense. Green v. United States, 355 U.S. 184, 187, 78 S. Ct. 221, 223 (1957). According to the Supreme Court:

> The underlying idea . . . is that the State with all its resources and power should not be allowed to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged offense, thereby subjecting him to embarrassment, expense and ordeal and compelling him to live in a continuing state of anxiety and insecurity, as well as enhancing the possibility that even though innocent he may be found guilty.

Id. at 187-88, 78 S. Ct. at 223; see also Sattazahn v. Pennsylvania, ___ U.S. ___, ___; 123 S. Ct. 732, 745-46 (2003) (reaffirming principle that the underlying purpose of the Double Jeopardy Clause is to prohibit repeated attempts by the state to convict, thereby exposing a defendant to embarrassment, expense, and the ordeal of another proceeding).

¶27 Double jeopardy principles generally do not apply to sentencing proceedings. United States v. DiFrancesco, 449 U.S. 117, 132, 101 S.

[7] "[N]or shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb . . . ." U.S. Const. amend. V.

— "No person shall . . . be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense." Ariz. Const. art. II, § 10.

Ct. 426, 435 (1980). Capital sentencing proceedings, however, provide an exception to the general rule. The penalty phase of a capital trial resembles an ordinary trial proceeding in which the sentencing authority chooses "between two alternatives together with standards to guide [its] decision, [and] the prosecution undert[akes] the burden of establishing facts beyond a reasonable doubt." Monge v. California, 524 U.S. 721, 730, 118 S. Ct. 2246, 2251 (1998) (discussing Bullington v. Missouri, 451 U.S. 430, 101 S. Ct. 1852 (1981)); see Arizona v. Rumsey, 467 U.S. 203, 212, 104 S. Ct. 2305, 2310 (1984) (holding double jeopardy applies to the penalty phase of capital trial because the penalty phase "proceeding is like a trial"). Therefore, we must determine whether resentencing the defendants under Arizona's new sentencing statutes violates the prohibition against double jeopardy.

Resentencing Does Not Increase Sentences.

¶28 The defendants argue that because Arizona's former law prescribing judge sentencing was unconstitutional, the most severe penalty they could have received for first degree murder at the original sentencing was life or natural life in prison. They assert that, under superseded section 13-703, a convicted murderer could not receive the death penalty because that punishment conceptually did not exist. Therefore, they argue, a resentencing proceeding under the new sentencing statutes would expose them to a more severe penalty than was originally available and thus constitutes double jeopardy. The defendants rely upon decisions from two state intermediate appellate courts, California v. Harvey, 142 Cal. Rptr. 887 (App. 1978), and State v. Choate, 151 Ariz. 57, 725 P.2d 764 (App. 1986).

¶29 In Harvey, a jury convicted Harvey of several counts, including first degree murder of a police officer. 142 Cal. Rptr. at 888. After Harvey's sentencing, the California Supreme Court declared the state's capital sentencing statute unconstitutional because it failed to bring mitigating evidence into the sentencing calculus. Id. at 890-91; see Rockwell v. Superior Court, 556 P.2d 1101, 1116 (Cal. 1976). While Harvey's appeal was pending, the California Legislature amended the state's capital sentencing scheme. Harvey, 142 Cal. Rptr. at 890-91. The state argued that Harvey should be resentenced under the new statute. Id. The appellate court disagreed, holding that resentencing would violate double jeopardy because, when the state supreme court held the former capital sentencing scheme unconstitutional, "that declaration automatically reduced appellant's sentence to life imprisonment." Id. at 891.

¶30 Similarly, in Choate, the Arizona Court of Appeals held that double jeopardy prevented resentencing of a defendant on a dangerous-nature sentencing issue. 151 Ariz. at 58, 725 P.2d at 765. A jury convicted Choate of second degree murder and aggravated assault. Id. at 57, 725 P.2d at 764. The court of appeals vacated the dangerous-nature sentence for the second degree murder conviction because that issue was not determined by a jury. Id. On remand, the trial judge ordered a new jury to convene to determine whether Choate should receive the dangerous-nature sentence. Id. Choate appealed that order. The court of appeals concluded that, because the trial judge mistakenly dismissed the jury without submitting the dangerous nature charge in the first case, permitting a new jury to consider the enhancement allegation would constitute double jeopardy. Id. at 58, 725 P.2d at 765.

¶31 The Supreme Court addressed this very issue in Dobbert, however, and reached a different conclusion. Dobbert made the same argument that the defendants make here. The Florida Supreme Court declared the death penalty statute in effect at the time of his murders unconstitutional. Therefore, Dobbert argued, he could not receive a death sentence because "at the time he murdered his children there was no death penalty 'in effect' in Florida." 432 U.S. at 297, 97 S. Ct. at 2300. The Supreme Court rejected this argument, holding that double jeopardy did not attach because a statute, albeit unconstitutional, permitting capital punishment for first degree murder existed at the time of the crimes. Id. at 298, 97 S. Ct. at 2300. That statute placed the defendant on notice that he faced capital punishment if he were convicted. Id.

¶32 The Harvey court distinguished Dobbert by noting that Dobbert was ultimately sentenced under a constitutional statute, whereas Harvey was not. 142 Cal. Rptr. at 890. We do not find the distinction persuasive, however, because it does not affect the Supreme Court's Dobbert analysis. There the Court discounted the defendant's "sophistic argument" because the more important consideration was that the state's first degree murder sentencing policy provided a death sentence even though the procedures for imposing that sentence later were found unconstitutional. Dobbert, 432 U.S. at 297-98, 97 S. Ct. at 2300 (quoting Chicot County Drainage Dist. v. Baxter State Bank, 308 U.S. 371, 374, 60 S. Ct. 317, 318 (1940)); see also Knapp v. Cardwell, 667 F.2d 1253, 1264 & n.9 (9th Cir. 1982) (rejecting argument that death sentence is automatically reduced "to life imprisonment immediately upon invalidation of the state's death penalty law"). In short, the Court rejected the defendants' argument in Dobbert.

¶33 The basic issue we must resolve is not whether a death sentence metaphysically existed when the defendants were sentenced, but rather whether any defendant was "acquitted" at his original trial of whatever findings were necessary to impose a death sentence. While a defendant can be resentenced following an appellate reversal of his or her original sentence, the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits imposing any sentence of which the defendant was either actually or impliedly "acquitted" in the first instance. Rumsey, 467 U.S. at 211, 104 S. Ct. at 2310; Bullington, 451 U.S. at 437, 445, 101 S. Ct. at 1857, 1861; Peak v. Acuna, 203 Ariz. 83, ___ ¶ 8, 50 P.3d 833, 835 (2002) (stating implied acquittal exists where appellate court reverses conviction for insufficiency of evidence and double jeopardy precludes retrial). Thus, a defendant cannot be sentenced to death at a subsequent sentencing proceeding if "the sentencer or reviewing court has decided that the prosecution has not proved its case that the death penalty is appropriate." Poland v. Arizona, 476 U.S. 147, 155, 106 S. Ct. 1749, 1755 (1986) (internal quotation marks omitted).

¶34 The Supreme Court has thoroughly treated and established the legal principle that applies here. In State v. Rumsey, a jury convicted the defendant of first degree murder. 130 Ariz. 427, 636 P.2d 1209 (1981).

During the sentencing phase of the trial, the judge, misinterpreting the pecuniary gain aggravating circumstance as applying only to a murder for hire, found no aggravating circumstances and sentenced the defendant to life in prison. Id. at 431-32, 636 P.2d at 1213-14. On appeal, we held that the pecuniary gain aggravating circumstance included any murder committed for financial gain and remanded the matter for resentencing. Id. at 431, 636 P.2d at 1213. On remand, the judge determined that the pecuniary gain circumstance existed and sentenced the defendant to death. State v. Rumsey, 136 Ariz. 166, 168, 665 P.2d 48, 50 (1983). We reviewed the case on direct appeal and held that Rumsey's death sentence violated the Double Jeopardy Clause because the life sentence imposed at his first trial implicitly acquitted him of the death sentence, and that Rumsey was "entitled to finality" on that issue. Id. at 175, 665 P.2d at 57.

¶35 The Supreme Court granted certiorari and affirmed. It held that a capital defendant cannot receive the death penalty on resentencing if he originally had been sentenced to life in prison. Rumsey, 467 U.S. at 212, 104 S. Ct. at 2310. The Court explained that "an acquittal on the merits by the sole decisionmaker in the proceeding is final and bars retrial on the same charge." Id. at 211, 104 S. Ct. at 2310. Thus, the Supreme Court's Rumsey decision speaks to situations in which the defendant originally received a sentence other than death.

¶36 In a similar case in which the defendant originally received a capital sentence, however, the Supreme Court ruled differently. In Poland v. Arizona, the Court held that capital defendants sentenced to death at their original sentencing proceeding and whose sentences were vacated on appeal can be resentenced to death on remand. 476 U.S. at 151, 106 S. Ct. at 1753. Both of the Poland brothers received death sentences following their first degree murder convictions. State v. Poland, 132 Ariz. 269, 273, 645 P.2d 784, 788 (1982). During the sentencing phase, the judge failed to find the pecuniary gain aggravating circumstance because, like the trial judge in Rumsey, he misunderstood that circumstance as applying only to a murder for hire. Id. at 285-86, 645 P.2d at 800-01. The judge did, however, find the "especially heinous, cruel or depraved" statutory aggravating factor and sentenced the defendants to death. Id. at 285, 645 P.2d at 800. On appeal, this court held that the evidence adduced during the sentencing proceeding did not support a finding of a heinous, cruel or depraved murder. Id. at 285, 645 P.2d at 800. We also restated that a killing need not be a murder for hire to qualify for the pecuniary gain aggravator. Id. at 286, 645 P.2d at 801. On remand, the judge again sentenced both Polands to death. State v. Poland (Patrick), 144 Ariz. 388, 392, 698 P.2d 183, 187 (1985); State v. Poland (Michael), 144 Ariz. 412, 414, 698 P.2d 207, 209 (1985). We again reviewed and affirmed the Polands' sentences on direct appeal and held that the evidence, although insufficient to support a finding of cruelty, did support a finding of pecuniary gain motive. Poland (Patrick), 144 Ariz. at 407, 698 P.2d at 202; Poland (Michael), 144 Ariz. at 416, 698 P.2d at 211.

¶37 On certiorari, the Supreme Court distinguished the Polands' case from Rumsey, and that distinction was critical. In Poland, both defendants originally received capital sentences. Unlike the judge in Rumsey's trial, no fact-finder had "acquitted" the Polands of capital murder by imposing a prison sentence at the first sentencing proceeding. Poland, 476 U.S. at 156-57, 106 S. Ct. at 1756. On resentencing, then, the defendants did not face sentencing on a charge of which they had been previously "acquitted" for double jeopardy purposes. Id. at 157, 106 S. Ct. at 1756. Therefore, jeopardy did not attach and double jeopardy did not bar the subsequent death sentences. Id.

¶38 Like the defendants in Poland, the defendants on direct appeal all received death sentences at their original trials. The fact-finder made those findings necessary to impose a death sentence. In no sense has a fact-finder concluded that the state failed to prove aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt. On remand, no defendant can receive a sentence greater than that which already has been imposed. Accordingly, we hold that jeopardy has not attached.

Resentencing Does Not Supplement the Original Jury Verdict.

¶39 The defendants also argue that resentencing violates double jeopardy because further jury proceedings supplement the original jury verdict, thereby violating each defendant's constitutional "right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal." Wade v. Hunter, 336 U.S. 684, 689, 69 S. Ct. 834, 837 (1949). Although completing a defendant's trial with the same judge or jurors is ideal, a defendant holds no absolute right to such an arrangement. In fact, in Wade v. Hunter, the Supreme Court affirmed a military conviction in which the charges were dropped from one court-martial proceeding and re-instituted in another to accommodate witnesses. Id. at 687-88, 69 S. Ct. at 836. According to the Supreme Court:

> The double-jeopardy provision of the Fifth Amendment . . . does not mean that every time a defendant is put to trial before a competent tribunal he is entitled to go free if the trial fails to end in a final judgment. Such a rule would create an insuperable obstacle to the administration of justice in many cases in which there is no semblance of the type of oppressive practices at which the double-jeopardy prohibition is aimed. There may be unforeseeable circumstances that arise during a trial making its completion impossible, such as the failure of a jury to agree on a verdict. In such event the purpose of law to protect society from those guilty of crimes frequently would be frustrated by denying courts power to put the defendant to trial again.

Id. at 688-89, 69 S. Ct. at 837.

¶40 The ability to resentence a capital defendant by a different set of jurors is implicit in double jeopardy cases decided by the Supreme Court in a death penalty context. See Rumsey, 467 U.S. at 211, 104 S.

Ct. at 2310; Wade, 336 U.S. at 688-89, 69 S. Ct. at 837.[8] A capital defendant whose original sentence is vacated on appeal can be resentenced to death so long as the defendant has not been "acquitted" of the death sentence. E.g., Sattazahn, ___ U.S. at ___, 123 S. Ct. at 738; Poland, 476 U.S. at 151, 106 S. Ct. at 1753.

The Arizona Constitution.

¶41 We reach the same result under Article II, Section 10 of the Arizona Constitution. In Pool v. Superior Court, we interpreted the state Double Jeopardy Clause more broadly than its federal counterpart when prosecutorial misconduct causes a mistrial. 139 Ariz. 98, 108, 677 P.2d 261, 271 (1984); accord State v. Minnitt, 203 Ariz. 431, ___ ¶ 29, 55 P.3d 774, 781 (2002). While we recognized the importance of consistency between federal and state constitutional law, we found it necessary to diverge from the double jeopardy standards established by the United States Supreme Court under the federal constitution. Our decision turned on the principle that the purpose of the Arizona Double Jeopardy Clause includes protecting citizens from facing multiple trials for the same offense because of prosecutorial bad faith:

> In our view, therefore, the resolution of the question of when jeopardy attaches should turn upon the concept of enforcing the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy when the right to be free from multiple trials, which that clause was meant to guarantee, would be impaired by the prosecutor's intentional, improper conduct. We do not agree that standards cannot be formulated to accomplish the objectives of the clause in situations such as this.

Pool, 139 Ariz. at 108, 677 P.2d at 271 (citation omitted).

[8] For the most part, recalling the defendant's original guilt phase jury also presents logistical problems and is wholly impractical.

¶42 The defendants do not face further jeopardy because of prosecutorial misconduct. Moreover, we find no reason to extend the state Double Jeopardy Clause beyond its federal counterpart under these facts. Therefore, we conclude that applying the new sentencing statutes does not constitute a double jeopardy violation under the Arizona Constitution.

Should Defendants Convicted of Murders Committed Before the Natural Life Sentence Became Available Have Their Sentences Reduced to Life if the Court Reduces Their Sentences?

¶43 In 1993, the Arizona Legislature amended A.R.S. section 13-703 to add a "natural life" sentencing option for defendants convicted of first degree murder. 1993 Ariz. Sess. Laws ch. 153, § 1. The parties stipulate, and we agree, that the sentence of life without the possibility of parole for twenty-five years, rather than natural life, must apply to those defendants sentenced under the pre-1993 statute. See, e.g., State v. Barreras, 181 Ariz. 516, 523-24 n.7, 892 P.2d 852, 859- 60 n.7 (1995) ("The amended statute [permitting natural life sentence] is inapplicable here, however, because this case arose before its effective date."). If subsequent proceedings result in life sentences, these defendants cannot receive a natural life sentence; only a sentence of life without the possibility of parole for twenty-five years can apply.

Should the Court Review Sixth Amendment Ring II Error as Structural Error or for Harmless Error?

¶44 The Supreme Court struck down Arizona's former capital sentencing statutes because they permitted a judge, rather than a jury, to find aggravating factors. Ring II, 536 U.S. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 2443. We conclude that Arizona's failure to submit this element of capital murder to the jury does not constitute structural error. Consequently, the Sixth Amendment does not require automatic reversal of a death sentence imposed under the former sentencing statutes. Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1, 8, 119 S. Ct. 1827, 1833 (1999); Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 306-07, 111 S. Ct. 1246, 1263 (1991). Instead, we will review the defendants' capital sentences for harmless error.

¶45 Most errors that we consider on appeal, even those involving constitutional error, constitute trial errors, "which occur[] during the presentation of the case to the jury, and which may therefore be quantitatively assessed in the context of other evidence presented." Fulminante, 499 U.S. at 307-08, 111 S. Ct. at 1264. In cases involving trial error, we consider whether the error, so assessed, was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. If so, we uphold the verdict entered. In a limited number of cases, however, structural error occurs. In such instances, we automatically reverse the guilty verdict entered. Unlike trial errors, structural errors "deprive defendants of 'basic protections' without which 'a criminal trial cannot reliably serve its function as a vehicle for determination of guilt or innocence . . . and no criminal punishment may be regarded as fundamentally fair.'" Neder, 527 U.S. at 8-9, 119 S. Ct. at 1833 (quoting Rose v. Clark, 478 U.S. 570, 577-78, 106 S. Ct. 3101, 3106 (1986)).

¶46 The Supreme Court has defined relatively few instances in which we should regard error as structural. Those instances involve errors such as a biased trial judge,[9] complete denial of criminal defense counsel,[10] denial of access to criminal defense counsel during an overnight trial recess,[11] denial of selfrepresentation in criminal cases,[12] defective reasonable doubt jury instructions,[13] exclusion of jurors of the defendant's race from grand jury selection,[14] excusing a juror because of his views on capital punishment,[15] and denial of a public criminal trial.[16] In all those instances, the error infected "the entire trial process" from beginning to end. Neder, 527 U.S. at 8, 119 S. Ct. at 1833 (quoting Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619, 630, 113 S. Ct. 1710, 1717 (1993)).

¶47 The Court's Ring II decision turned upon the fact that aggravating circumstances serve as the functional equivalent of an element of the greater capital murder offense, rather than as a sentencing factor. Ring II, 536 U.S. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 2443. "Because Arizona's enumerated aggravating factors operate as the functional equivalent of an element of a greater offense," the Supreme Court held, "the Sixth Amendment requires that they be found by a jury." Id. (emphasis added) (citation and internal quotations omitted). The essential question, therefore, is whether we should characterize Arizona's failure to submit this element of the capital murder offense to the jury as structural or trial error.[17]

¶48 In a decision foreshadowing Apprendi and Ring II, the Supreme Court declined to find structural error when the trial judge failed to submit an element of the offense to the jury. In Neder v. United States, the Court held that the trial court's failure to instruct the jury on the materiality element of federal tax fraud should be reviewed as trial error. 527 U.S. at 19-20, 119 S. Ct. at 1839. The Court distinguished an error omitting an element of the offense in a jury instruction from structural error: "Unlike such defects as the complete deprivation of counsel or trial before a biased judge, an instruction that omits an element of the offense does not necessarily render a criminal trial fundamentally unfair or an unreliable vehicle for determining guilt or innocence." Id. at 9, 119 S. Ct. at 1833. Thus, the Court concluded, omitting an element of the offense from the jury instruction is not the sort of error that taints the trial process itself.

[17] At various times, the Court's opinion suggests that Ring II error should be considered under a harmless error analysis. First, the Court declined to review the case for harmless error, stating instead that state courts should be the first to do so. Ring II, 536 U.S. at ___ n.7, 122 S. Ct. at 2443 n.7. Second, when commenting upon the fate of death row inmates after the Ring II decision, Justice O'Connor stated that "prisoners will be unable to satisfy the standards of harmless error or plain error review." Id. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 2449 (O'Connor, J., dissenting). Because the Court did not consider the issue of the appropriate standard of review, we do not regard these statements as conclusive.

Neder was tried before an impartial judge, under the correct standard of proof and with the assistance of counsel; a fairly selected, impartial jury was instructed to consider all of the evidence and argument in respect to Neder's defense against the tax charges. Of course, the court erroneously failed to charge the jury on the element of materiality, but that error did not render Neder's trial "fundamentally unfair," as that term is used in our cases. Id. at 9, 119 S. Ct. at 1834.[18]

¶49 In a similar decision that followed Apprendi and Ring II, the Court again applied the plain error test to a judge's consideration of a factor properly left to the jury. United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625, ___, 122 S. Ct. 1781, 1785 (2002). Federal law makes available enhanced penalties for drug offenses if the government proves a statutory threshold drug quantity. Id. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 1783. In Cotton, the government failed to allege in its superseding indictment the quantity of drugs involved in the offense, as required by the enhanced penalty. Id. Based on trial testimony, the district court found the petitioner "responsible for at least 500 grams of cocaine base," ten times the amount set by statute for an enhanced penalty, and imposed the enhanced sentence. Id. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 1784. The Supreme Court concluded that the district court improperly usurped the quantity finding from the grand jury, but reviewed for plain error. Id. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 1785-86. The Court held that the trial evidence was so [18] See also California v. Roy, 519 U.S. 2, 5-6, 117 S. Ct. 337, 339 (1996) (holding trial judge's failure to instruct jury on an element of accomplice liability first degree murder was a trial error to which the harmless error test applied).

"overwhelming" and "essentially uncontroverted" that "the error did not seriously affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of judicial proceedings." Id. at ___, 122 S. Ct. at 1786.

¶50 Although Neder and Cotton did not involve a capital sentence, their holdings that a failure to submit one element of an offense to a jury does not infect the trial process from beginning to end apply equally here. Under both Arizona's superseded and current capital sentencing schemes, a defendant's trial consists of two phases: a guilt phase and a penalty phase. In the guilt phase, the jury decides whether the defendant committed first degree or felony murder as defined by A.R.S. section 13-1105. If the jury finds the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, the trial continues to the penalty phase. Under the former system, the judge found, beyond a reasonable doubt, the ultimate element required to complete a capital murder offense: at least one aggravating circumstance not outweighed by one or more mitigating factors. A.R.S. § 13- 703.E. Defendants' trials thus took place before an impartial judge and jury, who used the correct standard of proof. Defendants received the assistance of counsel, who were available during all phases of their prosecution. Any error, then, affected the submission of one element rather than the entire trial and did not render the entire trial fundamentally unfair.[19] See Neder, 527 U.S. at 9, 119 S. Ct. at 1833.

¶51 We are not the first court to reach this conclusion. Courts implementing Apprendi and Ring have reached a consensus that structural error does not occur when a judge fails to submit to the jury an element of a crime, otherwise required to be found by a jury under the Sixth Amendment.[20] In United States v. Matthews, the court held

[19] The dissent disagrees with this conclusion, arguing that the defendants experienced a "[c]omplete denial of [the right to] trial by jury at the sentencing phase . . . ." Dissent, ¶ 109. Notably, the dissent does not suggest that the defendants were denied a trial by jury, and it could not, for the error here resulted not from denying defendants a jury trial but from the failure to submit one element of the capital offense to the jury for decision. A capital trial comprises just one trial, divided into guilt and sentencing phases, and has always been understood as such, both by this court and by the U.S. Supreme Court. See, e.g., Tuilaepa v. California, 512 U.S. 967, 971-72, 114 S. Ct. 2630, 2634 (1994) (holding trier of fact must find one aggravating circumstance at either the guilt or penalty phase); Payne v. Tennessee, 501 U.S. 808, 817, 823, 825-26, 111 S. Ct. 2597, 2604, 2607-08 (1991) (repeated references to "guilt phase" and "penalty phase" of capital trial); State v. Smith, 203 Ariz. 75, passim, 50 P.3d 825, passim (2002) (referring to "sentencing phase" and "sentencing hearing"); Ring I, 200 Ariz. at 279 ¶ 42, 25 P.3d at 1151 (referring to a "separate evidentiary hearing"). The only courts of which we are aware that have considered the argument that a capital trial consists of two "trials" rather than two phases of one trial have rejected the dissent's approach. Flamer v. Delaware, 68 F.3d 736, 758-59 (3rd Cir. 1995) ("The guilt and penalty phases of a capital trial are parts of a single proceeding, and there is no constitutional requirement that they be treated as if they were two entirely separate trials."); Holland v. Mississippi, 705 So. 2d 307, 330 ¶ 61 (Miss. 1997) (sentencing phase of a capital trial not a separate trial, but that phase of the case that concerns sentencing).

Arizona statutes reflect the single capital trial approach accepted by our court and the Supreme Court. Arizona law refers to the sentencing proceeding as the capital trial's "penalty phase." E.g., A.R.S. § 13-703.C. In addition, former and current capital sentencing statutes permit use at the sentencing phase of evidence adduced during the guilt phase of the trial. Id. §§ 13-703.C (2001), 13-703.D (Supp. 2002).

[20] The one case finding structural error is Esparza v. Mitchell, a case involving a challenge under the Eighth Amendment rather than the Sixth. In that case, two members of the panel held the harmless error test inapplicable in a capital case

"Apprendi error is susceptible to harmless error analysis." 312 F.3d 652, 665 (5th Cir. 2002). The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals also found "that errors in both the indictment and the charge to the jury are subject to harmless-error analysis." United States v. Dumes, 313 F.3d 372, 385 (7th Cir. 2002); accord United States v. Sanders, 247 F.3d 139, 150 (4th Cir. 2001) (citing cases from the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Seventh, and Eleventh Circuits holding that harmless error applies in Apprendi cases); Johnson v. Nevada, P.3d 450, 459-60 (Nev. 2002).[21]

¶52 Those holdings comport with prior Arizona law. In State v. Styers, we applied the fundamental error test to the trial judge's failure to define the "without legal authority" element of the kidnapping offense in instructions to the jury. 177 Ariz. 104, 111-12, 865 P.2d 765, 772-73 (1993).

¶53 Accordingly, we hold that Arizona's failure to require a trial judge to submit the aggravating circumstance element of capital murder where, under Ohio law, aggravating factors were required to be charged in the indictment but were not. 310 F.3d 414, 421 (6th Cir. 2002). The dissenting judge, concluding that harmless error applied, outlined the seminal Supreme Court cases defining the harmless error doctrine and concluded that the error involved did not amount to deprivation of "basic protections without which a criminal trial cannot reliably serve its function as a vehicle for determination of guilt or innocence." Id. at 428 (Suhrheinrich, J., dissenting) (quoting Neder, 527 U.S. at 8-9, 119 S. Ct. at 1833 (internal quotation marks omitted)).

[21] In addition to these decisions involving the Sixth Amendment, federal courts have held that Eighth Amendment violations occurring at the trial court level are subject to harmless error analysis. See, e.g., Jones (Lewis) v. United States, 527 U.S. 373, 402-05, 119 S. Ct. 2090, 2108-10 (1999); Clemons v. Mississippi, 494 U.S. 738, 110 S. Ct. 1441 (1990). Most recently, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that a death sentence imposed when an unconstitutionally vague jury instruction was given could be reviewed for harmless error. Valerio v. Crawford, 306 F.3d 742, 756 (9th Cir. 2002) ("When a state trial court sentences a defendant to death based in part on an unconstitutionally vague aggravating circumstance, the state appellate court . . . can find the error harmless under Chapman v. California." (Citation omitted.)).

to a jury does not constitute structural error. We will review the sentences of these defendants for harmless error.

Does Ring II Apply to Aggravating Circumstances Involving Prior Convictions?

¶54 Arizona law establishes two aggravating circumstances for prior criminal convictions.[22] A.R.S. § 13-703.F.1-.2. The first of Arizona's prior conviction factors, A.R.S. section 13- 703.F.1, applies when "[t]he defendant has been convicted of another offense in the United States for which under Arizona law a sentence of life imprisonment or death was imposable." The second, A.R.S. section 13-703.F.2, is implicated when "[t]he defendant was previously convicted of a serious offense, whether preparatory or completed."[23] In Almendarez-Torres v. United States, the Supreme Court held that a judge could consider prior convictions to enhance a penalty beyond that authorized by the facts established by the jury's verdict. 523 U.S. 224, 226-27, 118 S. Ct. 1219, 1222 (1998).

¶55 The State argues that Almendarez-Torres establishes an exception to Apprendi/Ring for the two prior conviction aggravating circumstances. According to the State, a judge may constitutionally determine the existence of any prior conviction. The defendants argue that Almendarez-Torres is no longer good law.[24] They also argue that

[23] Section 13-703.H defines "serious offense" as:

1. First degree murder.
2. Second degree murder.
3. Manslaughter.
4. Aggravated assault resulting in serious physical injury or committed by the use, threatened use or exhibition of a deadly weapon or dangerous instrument.
5. Sexual assault.
6. Any dangerous crime against children.
7. Arson of an occupied structure.
8. Robbery.
9. Burglary in the first degree.
10. Kidnapping.
11. Sexual conduct with a minor under fifteen years of age.

A.R.S. § 13-703.H (Supp. 2002).

Before 1993, this aggravating circumstance occurred if "[t]he defendant was previously convicted of a felony in the United States involving the use or threat of violence on another person." A.R.S. § 13-703.F.2 (1989), amended by 1993 Ariz. Sess. Laws ch. 153, § 1.

[24] The defendants argue that we should ignore Almendarez- Torres because Justice Thomas allegedly has repudiated his position in that case, thereby "expressly" invalidating the decision. In Apprendi v. New Jersey, Justice Thomas did express regret for voting with the five member Almendarez-Torres majority. 530 U.S. 466, 518-21, 120 S. Ct. 2348, 2378-79 (2000).

The defendants' supposition as to Justice Thomas's view, however, does not comport with the Supreme Court's recent decision in Sattazahn v. Pennsylvania, U.S.

the F.1 and F.2 aggravating circumstances do not fit within the prior conviction exception. Alternatively, they argue that the Arizona Constitution's jury trial guarantee should supplant Almendarez- Torres and require a jury determination of prior convictions. For the following reasons, we hold that Almendarez-Torres remains effective and that the Sixth Amendment does not require a jury to determine prior convictions under sections 13-703.F.1 and F.2.

1. Prior Conviction Aggravating Circumstance.

¶56 First we consider whether Arizona's statutory aggravating circumstance for prior convictions falls within the Almendarez-Torres exception. In cases handed down within the past five years, the Supreme Court consistently has stated that a statutory provision permitting increased penalties when a defendant has a prior conviction operates as a sentencing enhancement and not as an element of a criminal offense.[25]

¶57 In two Supreme Court cases, defendants challenged sentencing enhancements when the government failed to allege the factor increasing their penalty in the indictment. In Almendarez-Torres, the Court held that a prior conviction need not be alleged in a criminal indictment. 523 U.S. at 226-27, 118 S. Ct. at 1222. The Court first concluded that Congress intended to use recidivism as a sentencing factor and not as a substantive element. Id. at 230-31, 118 S. Ct. at 1226. It then noted that recidivist provisions traditionally are used exclusively as sentencing factors, pointing out that no federal criminal

___, 123 S. Ct. 732 (2003). In that case, Justice Thomas joined Justice Scalia's separate opinion which stated, in dicta, that "the existence of any fact (other than a prior conviction) increas[ing] the maximum punishment that may be imposed . . . constitutes an element [of the offense]." Id. at ___, 123 S. Ct. at 739 (emphasis added). This language demonstrates the dangers of vote-counting before the Court announces its decision on a particular issue.

[25] The Court continuously refers to the prior conviction enhancement as an exception to Apprendi. E.g., Sattazahn, ___U.S. at ___, 123 S. Ct. at 739; United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625, ___, 122 S. Ct. 1781, 1783 (2002).

statute contains recidivism as a statutory element. Id. at 244, 118 S. Ct. at 1231. Enhanced penalties for repeat offenders do "not relate to the commission of the offense, but go[] to the punishment only, and therefore . . . may be subsequently decided [by a judge]." Id. at 244, 118 S. Ct. at 1231 (quoting Graham v. West Virginia, 224 U.S. 616, 629, 32 S. Ct. 583, 588 (1912)).

¶58 In its next term, the Court decided a similar case and reached a revised, but consistent, conclusion. In Jones v. United States, the Court held that federal prosecutors must allege in the indictment and prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, an element of the federal car jacking statute the lower courts previously had regarded as a sentencing factor. 526 U.S. 227, 229, 119 S. Ct. 1215, 1217 (1999). In Jones's case, serious bodily injury provided the additional element. Id. at 231, 119 S. Ct. at 1218. Notwithstanding its decision, the Court reaffirmed that "not every fact expanding a penalty range must be stated in a felony indictment" and expressly distinguished sentence enhancements for prior criminal convictions from other statutory elements because the law traditionally regards "recidivism as a sentencing factor, not as an element to be set out in the indictment." Id. at 248-49, 119 S. Ct. at 1226-27. The Court appeared less concerned with the fact that Jones involved a Sixth Amendment challenge, while Almendarez-Torres did not, than with the fact that sentencing enhancements for prior convictions serve a traditional penological purpose. Id.

¶59 The Court revisited the prior conviction sentence enhancement issue in Apprendi, decided one year after Jones. In Apprendi, the Court held that a statutory provision providing an increased penalty when a crime was motivated by "hate" involved not a sentencing enhancer, but an element of the offense. 530 U.S. at 491-92, 120 S. Ct. at 2363. Consequently, the Sixth Amendment jury trial right required that the jury determine the element's existence before the enhanced penalty could be imposed. Id. at 490, 120 S. Ct. at 2362-63 ("[A]ny fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt."). The Court carefully distinguished its view that prior convictions are not elements of an offense and structured its holding to exclude prior convictions from its reach. Id. at 487-90, 120 S. Ct. at 2361-63.

¶60 The Apprendi Court found no need to submit the question of prior convictions to the jury because, unlike other factors, prior convictions already had been established through proceedings incorporating procedural safeguards:

> Both the certainty that procedural safeguards attached to any "fact" of prior conviction, and the reality that Almendarez-Torres did not challenge the accuracy of that "fact" in his case, mitigated the due process and Sixth Amendment concerns otherwise implicated in allowing a judge to determine a "fact" increasing punishment beyond the maximum statutory range.

530 U.S. at 488, 120 S. Ct. at 2362. Thus, permitting a judge to decide the "fact" of a prior conviction does not raise Sixth Amendment concerns; those convictions are themselves products of Sixth Amendment-compliant proceedings.

¶61 We cannot ignore a Supreme Court decision interpreting federal law unless the Court expressly overrules or casts cognizable doubt on that decision. In Agostini v. Felton, the Court stated:

> We do not acknowledge, and we do not hold, that other courts should conclude our more recent cases have, by implication, overruled an earlier precedent. We reaffirm that "[i]f a precedent of this Court has direct application in a case, yet appears to rest on reasons rejected in some other line of decisions, [the lower court] should follow the case which directly controls, leaving to this Court the prerogative of overruling its own decisions."

521 U.S. 203, 237, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 2017 (1997) (quoting Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/American Exp., Inc., 490 U.S. 477, 484, 109 S. Ct. 1917, 1921-22 (1989)); accord United States v. Gatewood, 230 F.3d

186, 192 (6th Cir. 2000); United States v. Pacheco-Zepeda, 234 F.3d 411, 414 (9th Cir. 2000) ("If the views of the Supreme Court's individual justices and the composition of the Court remain the same, Almendarez-Torres may eventually be overruled.") (citing Apprendi, 120 S. Ct. at 2362 ("[I]t is arguable that Almendarez-Torres was incorrectly decided, and that a logical application of our reasoning today should apply if the recidivist issue were contested.")); State v. Harrod, 200 Ariz. 309, 318 ¶ 44, 26 P.3d 492, 501 (2001) (rejecting defendant's argument that Apprendi implicitly overruled Walton), vacated on other grounds by Harrod v. Arizona, ___ U.S. ___, 122 S. Ct. 2653 (2002) (mem.). Our constitutional system requires adherence to the rule of law established in Almendarez-Torres unless and until the Court unequivocally disapproves its holding. Ring I, 200 Ariz. at 279-80 ¶ 44, 25 P.3d at 1151-52.

2. Lower Federal and State Appellate Courts.

¶62 Courts consistently have implemented both Apprendi and Almendarez-Torres. In cases decided after Apprendi, many defendants facing prior conviction sentence enhancements argued that Apprendi had either overruled or cast doubt upon Almendarez-Torres. Courts universally reject this argument and recognize that the two cases can be harmonized by construing Almendarez-Torres as the exception to Apprendi's general rule. E.g., United States v. Martino, 294 F.3d 346, 349 (2d Cir. 2002); United States v. Stone, 306 F.3d 241, 243 (5th Cir. 2002); Cherry v. Araneta, 203 Ariz. 532, ___ ¶ 5, 57 P.3d 391, 392-93 (App. 2002); State v. Kendall, 58 P.3d 660, 667-68 (Kan. 2002). In explaining its decision, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals stated:

> It is true that in Apprendi, the Court expressed reservations about Almendarez-Torres. However, the Court reasoned that any due process or Sixth Amendment concerns—arising out of the judicial determination of a "fact" that increased punishment beyond the statutory maximum—were mitigated in Almendarez-Torres by "[b]oth the certainty that procedural safeguards attached to any 'fact' of prior > conviction, and the reality that [the defendant] did not challenge the accuracy of that 'fact' in his case." Thus, the Court in Apprendi chose not to overrule Almendarez-Torres, and unmistakably carved out an exception for "prior convictions" that specifically preserved the holding of Almendarez-Torres.

Pacheco-Zepeda, 234 F.3d at 414 (citations omitted).

¶63 The Supreme Court consistently has held that legislatures may permit a judge to impose an increased penalty based upon a defendant's recidivism. We therefore conclude that the Sixth Amendment does not require a jury to find prior convictions beyond a reasonable doubt.

3. F.1 and F.2 Prior Conviction Aggravating Factors.

¶64 Several defendants whose cases are consolidated in this appeal received death sentences based, at least in part, upon prior conviction findings made by a sentencing judge. Following the teachings of Almendarez-Torres, Jones and Apprendi, we hold that the Sixth Amendment does not require remanding these cases for resentencing on the F.1 and F.2 circumstances.

¶65 The characteristic of a prior conviction aggravating circumstance that sets it apart from other circumstances is that the original criminal proceeding, through either a guilty plea or a verdict of guilt, established the circumstance. No additional benefit derives from having a jury re-find an aggravating circumstance already established through a guilty plea or a jury verdict. At each proceeding giving rise to the prior criminal conviction, defendants either waived their right to a jury trial or received a jury determination of guilt, and procedural safeguards protected the defendant against constitutional violations. Moreover, each defendant had an opportunity to appeal his conviction.

¶66 The F.1 and F 2 aggravating circumstances contemplate a more severe punishment for persons who continue to commit crimes. Our jurisprudence traditionally has viewed recidivism as a sentencing factor to be determined by a judge. Almendarez-Torres, 523 U.S. at 243, 118 S. Ct. at 1230. Moreover, under the pre-Ring II capital sentencing scheme, the legislature clearly intended prior convictions to be sentencing factors and not substantive elements of capital murder. See, e.g., A.R.S. § 13-703.F–.G (Supp. 2001) (instructing the court to consider aggravating circumstances when deciding which sentence to impose).

¶67 We reach a different conclusion for those defendants for whom the trial judge found an F.2 aggravating circumstance prior to 1993. As to those defendants, determining the presence of the F.2 factor required additional fact finding; the judge needed to go beyond the mere fact that the prior conviction existed.

¶68 Arizona amended the requirements for finding an F.2 factor in 1993.[26] Prior to the 1993 amendment, section 13- 703.F.2 permitted finding this aggravating circumstance when "[t]he defendant was previously convicted of a felony in the United States involving the use or threat of violence on another person." A.R.S. § 13-703.F.2 (1989) (emphasis added). State law did not define "violence" in this context. In United States v. Breitweiser, the court pointed out:

> If a recidivist statute permitted enhancement based on proof of underlying conduct, however, factual questions could arise as to exactly what conduct the defendant engaged in. Typically, such factual questions are within the province of a jury and this Court doubts that the Supreme Court would construe Almendarez-Torres as applying to such situations.

220 F. Supp. 2d 1374, 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2002). We agree that when an additional finding must be made beyond the bare fact that a prior conviction exists, the Sixth Amendment demands that a jury perform this task. That situation can arise for defendants whose F.2 factor depended upon a finding that a prior conviction reflected a crime involving the use or threat of violence. None of the consolida defendants were sentenced under such a circumstance. Therefore, no of these cases involve a Sixth Amendment violation based on a judge's finding of one or more F.2 aggravating circumstances.

4. The Arizona Constitution.

¶69 This court has held that the Arizona Constitution's Sixth Amendment analog, Article II, Section 23,[27] provides substantially the same right to a jury trial as does the Sixth Amendment. State v. Carlson, 202 Ariz. 570, 577 ¶ 18, 48 P.3d 1180, 1187 (2002). Nevertheless, the defendants urge us to look to the Arizona Constitution to find a requirement that prior conviction aggravating circumstances must be found by a jury.

¶70 They point to two decisions. The first, State v. Carlson, rejected an argument that the Arizona constitutional right to an impartial jury provides greater protection than does the federal constitution against pretrial publicity affecting the jury pool. Id. at 576-77 ¶¶ 17-18, 48 P.3d at 1186-87. We stated that our constitution does not afford any greater protection to defendants against pretrial media coverage than does the federal constitution. Id. at 577 ¶ 18, 48 P.3d at 1187. The second case, State ex rel. McDougall v. Strohson, held that Arizona's Constitution traditionally provides greater access to jury trials than that required by the federal constitution. 190 Ariz. 120, 121-22, 945 P.2d 1251, 1252-53 (1997). Under the federal constitution, only crimes punishable by more than six months in jail must be tried by a jury. Id. at 122, 945 P.2d at

[27] That provision states:

> The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate. Juries in criminal cases in which a sentence of death or imprisonment for thirty years or more is authorized by law shall consist of twelve persons. In all criminal cases the unanimous consent of the jurors shall be necessary to render a verdict. In all other cases, the number of jurors, not less than six, and the number required to render a verdict, shall be specified by law.

Ariz. Const. art. II, § 23.

1253. In instances in which a defendant can be sentenced to less than six months in jail, in contrast, our constitution demands a jury trial if "the moral quality of the act charged, and its relationship to common law crimes" requires that a jury determine guilt.[28] Id.

¶71 In relying on these decisions, the defendants overlook the distinction between jury impartiality or jury access issues and the Apprendi/Ring issue. The Carlson case rejected an expansive interpretation of the Arizona Constitution because we were unwilling to move beyond federal precedent in this area. Our holding in Strohson means only that a defendant is entitled to a jury trial for certain minor crimes for which the federal constitution does not require a jury trial.

¶72 Under these facts, then, we hold that Article II, Section 23 provides substantially the same jury trial right as does the Sixth Amendment.

B.
Can the Finding of an Aggravating Circumstance Be Implicit in the Jury's Verdict of Conviction?

¶73 We asked the parties to discuss whether any aggravating circumstance could necessarily derive from a jury's verdict of conviction for first degree murder, either standing alone or when considered in conjunction with other contemporaneous convictions. The State argues that pecuniary gain, A.R.S. section 13-703.F.5, other homicides committed during the commission of the offense, A.R.S. section 13-703.F.8, and age of victim less than fifteen years or seventy years or older, A.R.S. section 13-703.F.9, can logically inhere in a verdict. The defendants argue that an aggravating circumstance can never be implicit.

[28] For instance, we have held that the crimes of driving under the influence, Rothweiler v. Superior Court, 100 Ariz. 37, 410 P.2d 479 (1966), and possession of marijuana, State ex rel. Dean v. Dolny, 161 Ariz. 297, 778 P.2d 1193 (1989), require a jury trial even though they are punishable by less than six months in jail.

¶74 We hold that the pecuniary gain and multiple homicide aggravators usually are not implicit in a jury's verdict. However, the age of the victim can be implicit in the verdict, if the jury simultaneously convicts the defendant of an offense that includes the age of the murdered victim as an element of the crime.[29]

1. Pecuniary Gain.

¶75 Under A.R.S. section 13-703.F.5, an aggravating circumstance exists when a murder is committed "as consideration for the receipt, or in expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value." A.R.S. § 13-703.F.5. To establish the pecuniary gain aggravating circumstance, the state must prove that the murder would not have occurred but for the defendant's pecuniary motive. State v. Harding, 137 Ariz. 278, 296-97, 670 P.2d 283, 394-95 (1983).

¶76 Determining whether a defendant murdered his victim for pecuniary gain requires a highly fact-intensive inquiry. The state must establish the connection between the murder and motive through direct or strong circumstantial evidence. State v. Cañez, 202 Ariz. 133, 159 ¶ 94, 42 P.3d 564, 590 (2002) (holding murder of victim and only witness to robbery "is powerful circumstantial evidence of an intent to facilitate escape" and supports finding pecuniary motive); State v. Gillies, 135 Ariz. 500, 512, 662 P.2d 1007, 1019 (1983) ("Without some tangible evidence, or strong circumstantial inference, it is not for the sentencing court to conclude that because money and items were taken, the purpose of the murder was pecuniary gain.").

¶77 Complex fact situations require careful attention and analysis before a fact-finder confidently can conclude that pecuniary ends motivated the killing. When the state concurrently prosecutes a capital defendant for first degree murder and, for instance, robbery, both crimes resulting from the same occurrence, the state does not establish

[29] The 2002 amendment did not change the F.5 and F.8 aggravating circumstances. 2002 Ariz. Sess. Laws, 5th Spec. Sess., ch. 1, § 1. It did, however, make a technical change to the F.9 factor. Id.

the pecuniary gain factor simply by showing that the robbery occurred. Rather, the state assumes the additional burden of showing that pecuniary gain was "a motive, cause, or impetus for the murder and not merely the result of the murder." State v. Kayer, 194 Ariz. 423, 433 ¶ 32, 984 P.2d 31, 41 (1999); see, e.g., State v. Lee, 185 Ariz. 549, 558, 917 P.2d 692, 701 (1996) (affirming pecuniary gain aggravating circumstance where defendant killed to facilitate escape after robbery).

¶78 The pecuniary gain factor thus requires more than the jury's conviction of a defendant for first degree murder and robbery or burglary. The fact-finder must draw the separate conclusion that the defendant killed, at least in part, for pecuniary motive. For that reason, we cannot conclude that a jury finding of pecuniary gain inheres in its robbery or burglary verdict.

¶79 Therefore, we will apply a harmless error analysis to the pecuniary gain factor. In those instances in which no reasonable jury could find that the state failed to prove a pecuniary gain motive beyond a reasonable doubt, we will find harmless error affecting that factor. In other instances, we will consider whether the Ring II error requires that we remand for resentencing.

2. Multiple Homicides.

¶80 A.R.S. section 13-703.F.8 permits a judge to find an aggravating circumstance if "[t]he defendant has been convicted of one or more other homicides, as defined in § 13-1101, that were committed during the commission of the offense." A.R.S. § 13-703.F.8. As with the pecuniary gain factor, this factor requires the state to establish more than that the jury convicted the defendant of first degree murder and one or more other homicides occurring around the same time. Instead, all homicides must take place during "one continuous course of criminal conduct." State v. Rogovich, 188 Ariz. 38, 45, 932 P.2d 794, 801 (1997) (quoting State v. Ramirez, 178 Ariz. 116, 130, 871 P.2d 237, 251 (1994)). This conclusion can be drawn only after the fact-finder analyzes "the temporal, spatial, and motivational relationships between the capital homicide and the collateral [homicide], as well as

. . . the nature of that [homicide] and the identity of its victim." Id. (quoting State v. Lavers, 168 Ariz. 376, 393, 814 P.2d 333, 350 (1991)).

¶81 A jury verdict convicting a defendant of two or more homicides does not in itself establish the multiple homicide aggravating circumstance. Without a finding that the murders are temporally, spatially and motivationally related, the bare jury verdict does not implicitly support the F.8 aggravator. Id.

¶82 We will find harmless error affecting this factor in those cases in which no reasonable jury could find that the state failed to prove the F.8 factor beyond a reasonable doubt. In other instances, we will consider whether the Ring II error requires that we remand for resentencing.

3. Age of Victim.

¶83 Under A.R.S. section 13-703.F.9, an aggravating circumstance exists when, at the time the murder was committed, "[t]he defendant was an adult . . . or tried as an adult and the murdered person was under fifteen years of age or was seventy years of age or older." A.R.S. § 13-703.F.9. The statute is straightforward; the ages of the offender and victim invoke the aggravator. Medina, 193 Ariz. at 511 ¶ 23, 975 P.2d at 101 (holding this aggravating circumstance does not require further finding that the defendant was aware of the victim's age). The F.9 finding is implicit in the jury's verdict if the jury convicts the defendant of first degree murder and another crime committed against the murder victim in which the age of the victim constitutes a substantive element of the crime.

¶84 In some instances, Arizona's criminal code defines crimes based on the young age of the victim. For example, a person commits child molestation "by intentionally or knowingly engaging in or causing a person to engage in sexual contact, except sexual contact with the female breast, with a child under fifteen years of age." A.R.S. § 13-1410.A (2001).

¶85 Because the victim's age constitutes a substantive element of certain criminal offenses, a conviction necessarily reflects a jury determination that the victim was less than fifteen years old. The jury will have already found the necessary fact, age of the victim, through criminal proceedings compliant with Sixth Amendment safeguards. Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 488, 120 S. Ct. at 2362. Under these circumstances, the jury's implicit finding of the victim's age satisfies the F.9 aggravating circumstance.

¶86 If the trial judge found the F.9 factor and the jury also convicted the defendant of an age-dependent crime committed against the murder victim, we will find any Ring II error harmless. Other circumstances that may involve harmless error include, for example, those instances in which the defendant stipulated to the age of the victim or in which overwhelming evidence establishes the victim's age. In other instances, we will consider whether the Ring II error requires that we remand for resentencing.

C.
If One Aggravating Factor Was Not Subject to Ring II, Was Implicitly Found by the Jury or it Was Otherwise Obvious that One Aggravator Has Been Established Beyond a Reasonable Doubt,Is There Need for Resentencing?

¶87 The State asserts that if the jury implicitly found one aggravating factor or the trial judge found one factor not subject to the Ring II analysis, we can uphold the capital sentence imposed by the trial judge as harmless error. The argument relies upon the fact that Arizona's superseded sentencing scheme rendered a defendant "death eligible" if one aggravating factor existed. Ring I, 200 Ariz. at 279 ¶ 42, 25 P.3d at 1151. Nothing in Ring II, the State argues, prevents a trial judge from finding the second and succeeding aggravating factors, as well as finding mitigating factors and balancing them against the aggravator.

¶88 A narrow reading of Ring II may permit a judge to decide the existence of additional aggravating factors in the circumstances described by the State. As the State contends, once the government establishes any aggravating factor, a defendant becomes "death eligible" in the strict sense, and establishing additional aggravating factors does not render a defendant "more" death eligible. In our view, however, Ring II should not be read that narrowly. Although the Court there considered a death sentence based upon the existence of a single aggravating factor, we conclude that Ring II requires a jury to consider all aggravating factors urged by the state and not either exempt from Ring II, implicit in the jury's verdict, or otherwise established beyond a reasonable doubt.

¶89 Another factor leads us to conclude that we should not adopt the State's argument. As is evident, the procedures urged by the State do not reflect any sentencing procedure ever adopted by our legislature. In both the superseded and current capital sentencing schemes, the legislature assigned to the same fact-finder responsibility for considering both aggravating and mitigating factors, as well as for determining whether the mitigating factors, when compared with the aggravators, call for leniency. Neither a judge, under the superseded statutes, nor the jury, under the new statutes, can impose the death penalty unless that entity concludes that the mitigating factors are not sufficiently substantial to call for leniency. A.R.S. §§ 13- 703.E (Supp. 2002) and 13-703.F (Supp. 2001). The process involved in determining whether mitigating factors prohibit imposing the death penalty plays an important part in Arizona's capital sentencing scheme. We will not speculate about how the State's proposal would impact this essential process. Clemons v. Mississippi, 494 U.S. 738, 754, 110 S. Ct. 1441, 1451 (1990) ("In some situations, a state appellate court may conclude that peculiarities in a case make appellate . . . harmless error analysis extremely speculative or impossible."); see also Johnson v. Nevada, 59 P.3d 450 (Nev. 2002)(as applied to Nevada law, Ring II requires jury to weigh mitigating and aggravating factors under Nevada's statute requiring the fact-finder to further find whether mitigating circumstances are sufficient to outweigh the aggravating circumstances).

¶90 We therefore hold that the presence of one or more aggravating factors either exempt from Ring II, inherent in the jury's guilty verdict, or otherwise established beyond a reasonable doubt does not, in itself, establish that a defendant's capital sentence resulted from harmless error.

D.

Does Ring II Require Resentencing if a Defendant Conceded or Did Not Challenge the Aggravating Factors Found by the Trial Court?

¶91 The State contends that if a defendant stipulates to facts sufficient to establish an aggravating factor or fails to challenge one or more aggravating circumstances, that factor stands. The failure renders error harmless and essentially establishes overwhelming, undisputed proof of that factor's existence. The defendants argue that neither concession nor failure to contest waives a defendant's right to a jury trial on aggravating factors. Substantial differences exist between a defendant's decision to concede an aggravating circumstance and a defendant's decision not to contest an aggravating circumstance, and we distinguish between those situations.

¶92 In United States v. Cotton, the Supreme Court reviewed a case in which the defendant did not contest an element responsible for his sentence enhancement. 535 U.S. 625, 122 S. Ct. 1781 (2002). The issue was whether Apprendi required vacating an enhanced sentence under a federal narcotics criminal statute when the government failed to include in the indictment the amount of cocaine, a fact essential to justifying the enhanced sentence. Id. at ___, ___ n.3, 122 S. Ct. at 1783, 1786 n.3. After examining for plain error, the Court found no reversible error under Apprendi because the government presented overwhelming and essentially uncontroverted evidence of the amount of cocaine base at trial. Id. at ___ & n.3, 122 S. Ct. at 1786 & n.3; see also United States v. Smith, 282 F.3d 758, 771-72 (9th Cir. 2002) (holding Apprendi error harmless where defendant failed to contradict evidence establishing drug quantity or object to jury instruction stating threshold drug quantity need not be found); Robinson v. United States, 129 F. Supp. 2d 627, 632 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (holding failure to submit drug quantity issue to jury did not prejudice defendant when he did not challenge the amount).

¶93 In cases in which a defendant stipulates, confesses or admits to facts sufficient to establish an aggravating circumstance, we will regard that factor as established. Our harmless error inquiry then focuses on whether no reasonable jury could find that the mitigation evidence adduced during the penalty phase is "sufficiently substantial to call for leniency." A.R.S. §13-703.E. Unless we conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that a jury would impose a death sentence, we must remand the case for resentencing. See Id. § 13-703.E; Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1, 19, 119 S. Ct. 1827, 1838 (1999); State v. Bible, 175 Ariz. 549, 588, 858 P.2d 1152, 1191 (1993). See infra, Section VIII.

¶94 When a defendant simply fails to challenge an aggravating circumstance at the penalty phase, the state retains the burden of proving the aggravator's existence beyond a reasonable doubt. See State v. Spreitz, 190 Ariz. 129, 147, 945 P.2d 1260, 1278 (1997). Our inquiry then becomes whether the state has met its burden. If reasonable doubt exists as to this factor, then we must consider remanding for resentencing.

Can the State Raise Harmless Error if It Did Not Make That Argument Below?

¶95 The defendants argue that the State waived its harmless error argument by failing to raise it prior to this stage of litigation. We disagree. Until the Supreme Court overruled Walton v. Arizona, the State had no reason to argue that failure to obtain jury findings as to aggravating factors constituted error at all. Lockhart v. Fretwell, 506 U.S. 364, 369 n.2, 113 S. Ct. 838, 842 n.2 (1993) ("Harmless-error analysis is triggered only after the reviewing court discovers that an error has been committed."). Only after the Court defined constitutional error in Arizona's sentencing procedure did the question whether such error was harmless arise. We will not penalize the State for failing to anticipate the Court's holding in Ring II.

¶96 Moreover, the Arizona Constitution imposes an independent obligation on the state judiciary not to reverse a case "for technical error in pleadings or proceedings when upon the whole case it shall appear that substantial justice has been done." Ariz. Const. art. VI, § 27 (2001); accord A.R.S. § 13-3987 (2001). If error is harmless, in these or other cases, substantial justice has been done.

F.

Does the Sixth Amendment Require the Jury to Make Enmund-Tison Findings in Capital Felony Murder Cases?

¶97 In cases of first degree felony murder convictions, an Enmund-Tison finding must be made to satisfy the Eighth Amendment's proportionality standard. Tison v. Arizona, 481 U.S. 137, 107 S. Ct. 1676 (1987); Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S. Ct. 3368 (1982). In Arizona, the trial judge makes this finding. See State v. Greenway, 170 Ariz. 155, 171, 823 P.2d 22, 38 (1991). The defendants argue that Ring II requires that Enmund-Tison findings be made by a jury. We hold that the Sixth Amendment principles of Apprendi/Ring do not require a jury to make Enmund-Tison findings.

¶98 The Eighth Amendment's Cruel and Unusual Punishment Clause prohibits "all punishments which by their excessive length or severity are greatly disproportioned to the offenses charged."[30] Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349, 371, 30 S. Ct. 544, 551 (1910) (quoting O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U.S. 323, 339-40, 12 S. Ct. 693, 699-700 (1892) (Field, J., dissenting)). In capital punishment terms, the Eighth

[30] "Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." U.S. Const. amend. VIII. The Eighth Amendment applies to the states through the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660, 666, 82 S. Ct. 1417, 1420 (1962).

Amendment requires courts to consider carefully death sentences imposed on defendants convicted of felony murder. In Enmund v. Florida and Tison v. Arizona, the Supreme Court imposed Eighth Amendment cruel and unusual punishment restraints in capital felony murder cases. The Court held that Eighth Amendment principles forbid a state from sentencing to death a defendant "who aids and abets a felony in the course of which a murder is committed by others but who does not himself kill, attempt to kill, or intend that a killing take place or that lethal force will be employed." Enmund, 458 U.S. at 797, 102 S. Ct. at 3376. Five years later, in Tison, the Court refined its prior decision by holding that "major participation in the felony committed, combined with reckless indifference to human life, is sufficient to satisfy the Enmund culpability requirement." 481 U.S. at 158, 107 S. Ct. at 1688.

¶99 The Supreme Court already has addressed the question whether a jury must make Enmund-Tison findings. In Cabana v. Bullock, the Court held that the federal constitution does not require a jury to determine a defendant's level of culpability in capital felony murder cases. 474 U.S. 376, 385, 106 S. Ct. 689, 696 (1986). Foreshadowing its recent Sixth Amendment decisions, the Court distinguished Enmund from the statutorily defined elements of a substantive offense at issue in Apprendi:

> [O]ur ruling in Enmund does not concern the guilt or innocence of the defendant—it establishes no new elements of the crime of murder that must be found by the jury. Rather, as the Fifth Circuit itself has recognized, Enmund "does not affect the state's definition of any substantive offense, even a capital offense." Enmund holds only that the principles of proportionality embodied in the Eighth Amendment bar imposition of the death penalty upon a class of persons who may nonetheless be guilty of the crime of capital murder as defined by state law: that is, the class of murderers who did not themselves kill, attempt to kill, or intend to kill.

Id. (citation and footnote omitted)(emphasis added).

¶100 We conclude that this distinction withstands Apprendi and Ring II. Enmund-Tison findings affect sentencing very differently than do findings of aggravating circumstances. Even if a jury is satisfied that the state has established all statutory elements for capital felony murder, including aggravating circumstances, the judge must remove the defendant from the class of defendants otherwise death-eligible if she cannot make Enmund-Tison findings. The question is not whether the state has met its burden but whether, given a defendant's culpable mental state, the government can impose capital punishment consistent with the Eighth Amendment's proportionality threshold. That determination involves not a Sixth Amendment jury trial right but rather an Eighth Amendment proportionality analysis, traditionally the prerogative of the judge. As the Cabana Court stated:

> [T]he decision whether a sentence is so disproportionate as to violate the Eighth Amendment in any particular case, like other questions bearing on whether a criminal defendant's constitutional rights have been violated, has long been viewed as one that a trial judge or an appellate court is fully competent to make.

Id. at 386, 106 S. Ct. at 697.

¶101 The difference between aggravating circumstances as substantive elements of a greater offense and the Enmund-Tison findings as a restraint on capital sentencing dictates our decision that Apprendi/Ring does not require these findings to be made by the jury. Id. The Sixth Amendment assigns to the jury responsibility for determining whether all statutory criminal elements exist. Therefore, a defendant cannot receive a particular sentence unless a jury finds all the elements of the offense charged. Id. at 384, 106 S. Ct. at 696 (citing Duncan v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 145, 88 S. Ct. 1444 (1968)). The Enmund-Tison findings, on the other hand, operate as a judicially crafted instrument used to measure proportionality between a defendant's criminal culpability and the sentence imposed. These two rules of law are conceptually and constitutionally distinct. We hold that the Sixth Amendment does not require that a jury, rather than a judge, make Enmund- Tison findings.

VIII.

Conclusion.

¶102 Our review of aggravating circumstances will produce one of several results. In some of these consolidated cases, our review will not allow the conclusion, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the error did not contribute to or affect the capital sentence. In those cases, we must remand for resentencing.

¶103 Other cases will involve aggravators that we will regard as established. In some of those cases, the aggravating factors fall outside the Ring II analysis. Others will involve aggravating factors that inhere in the jury's verdict or to which a defendant stipulated. In yet other instances, the evidence presented at trial and the sentencing hearing may be sufficiently overwhelming that we will conclude no reasonable jury would have failed to find the factor established beyond a reasonable doubt. Even in these instances, however, one further determination can affect our harmless error analysis.

¶104 Arizona's statutes require more than the presence of one or more statutorily defined aggravating factors to impose the death penalty:

> In determining whether to impose a sentence of death or life imprisonment, the trier of fact shall take into account the aggravating and mitigating circumstances that have been proven. The trier of fact shall impose a sentence of death if the trier of fact finds one or more of the aggravating circumstances enumerated in subsection F of this section and then determines that there are no mitigating circumstances sufficiently substantial to call for leniency.

A.R.S. § 13-703.E (emphasis added);[31] see also Id. § 13-703.01.H. Because a trier of fact must determine whether mitigating circumstances call for leniency, we will affirm a capital sentence only if we conclude, beyond a reasonable doubt, that no rational trier of fact would determine that the mitigating circumstances were sufficiently substantial to call for leniency. If we cannot reach that conclusion, we must find reversible error and remand the case for resentencing. In separate opinions, we will consider individually the sentences of these defendants, applying the standards set forth in this opinion.

F E L D M A N, Justice (Retired), concurring in part and dissenting in part:

¶105 I dissent from Part VI of the majority opinion because I cannot agree that the complete absence of the jury in the separate capital sentencing proceeding that determines a defendant's eligibility for the death penalty is reviewable for harmless error. In my view, the denial of a jury in the sentencing phase is a defect in the fundamental mechanism of the trial and is therefore structural error; thus the death sentence should be vacated. This is not only required by logic but is the teaching of a long line of our cases.

¶106 We have just recently held, for instance, that the erroneous exclusion for cause of prospective jurors was structural error that required reversal. State v. Anderson, 197 Ariz. 314, 324, ¶ 23, 4 P.3d 369, 379, ¶ 23 (2000). To hold otherwise and review for harmless error would lead us "down a slippery slope that could be used to justify overlooking every structural error [such as] denial of a jury trial or the right to counsel." Id. at 323, ¶¶ 21-22, 4 P.3d at 378, ¶¶ 21-22; see also State v. Henley, 141 Ariz. 465, 469, 687 P.2d 1220, 1224 (1984) (structural error to try defendant to eight-person jury when constitution guaranteed twelve-person jury for crime charged); State v. Luque, 171 Ariz. 198, 200, 829 P.2d 1244, 1246 (App. 1992) (trial to wrong number of jurors is fundamental, structural error).

[31] The legislature's post-Ring II amendments to section 13-703 replaced "court" with "trier of fact," referring to the jury or, in cases of a waiver of trial by jury, the court. 2002 Ariz. Sess. Laws, 5th Spec. Sess., ch. 1, § 1.

¶107 If, as we have held, it is fundamental and structural error erroneously to exclude potential jurors or try a defendant to an insufficient number of jurors, it is difficult to see how deprivation of trial by jury at the capital sentencing phase can be less erroneous. The reason is plain: it is simply impossible to predict what a jury would have done if one had been impaneled. State v. Smith, 197 Ariz. 333, 339-40, 4 P.3d 388, 394-95 (App. 1999). Appellate review of such error is not "like measuring the effect of erroneous evidentiary rulings against the overall weight of properly admitted evidence. Errors involving the composition of the court or jury affect the legitimacy of the entire proceeding, leaving nothing to measure or weigh and requiring reversal." Anderson, 197 Ariz. at 323, ¶ 22, 4 P.3d 378, ¶ 22. The error in these cases is unlike trial errors, which can be "quantitatively assessed in the context" of all the evidence. Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 307, 111 S. Ct. 1246, 1264 (1991).

¶108 The majority concludes, however, that the failure to submit any part of the determination of aggravating circumstances to a jury was not structural error. Op. at ¶ 44. I cannot agree. As the majority explains, in capital sentencing prior to Ring II, the trial proceeded in two phases, a guilt phase and a sentencing phase. Op. at ¶¶ 7-13. The first, before a jury, was concerned only with the question of conviction or acquittal of the crime of first degree murder. The second, tried to the court under Arizona's prior sentencing statute, was concerned only with the issue of aggravating factors and mitigating circumstances. Each phase was tried to different factfinders on different issues. The Supreme Court, in these circumstances, has held that the sentencing phase resembles a separate trial, so much so that the double jeopardy clause applies both to the guilt phase and the sentencing phase. See, e.g., Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 686-87, 104 S. Ct. 2052, 2064 (1984); Bullington v. Missouri, 451 U.S. 430, 101 S. Ct. 1852, 1862 (1981) (double jeopardy protection attaches to capital sentencing proceeding); Arizona v. Rumsey, 467 U.S. 203, 209, 104 S. Ct. 2305, 2309 (1984) (Arizona capital sentencing proceedings resemble a trial for purposes of the double jeopardy clause). This was our view also. See State v. Rumsey, 136 Ariz. 166, 665 P.2d 48 (1983).

¶109 Complete denial of trial by jury at the sentencing phase, therefore, would seem to preclude harmless error analysis. The right to trial by jury is "fundamental to the American scheme of justice." Duncan v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 145, 149, 88 S. Ct. 1444, 1447 (1968). The Supreme Court has now held defendants were entitled to a jury at the sentencing phase to determine the existence of the alleged aggravating factors but were denied that constitutional right. Ring v. Arizona 536 U.S., ___, ___, 122 S. Ct. 2428, 2443 (2002) (Ring II). As noted, in Arizona denial of a jury trial is structural error. The same rule obtains in the federal system. Sullivan v. Louisiana, 508 U.S. 275, 281-282, 113 S. Ct. 2078, 2083 (1993) (the deprivation of the right to a jury trial unquestionably qualifies as structural error).

¶110 The majority rejects this conclusion and supports its decision on the basis of Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1, 119 S. Ct. 1927 (1999). Op. at ¶ 44. But Neder and the cases that rely on it are cases of trial error, not error in the structure or mechanism of the trial. Neder was tried to a jury which was present during the entire trial. The error consisted of the trial judge failing to instruct the jury on materiality, one of the elements of the crime of tax fraud. The difference is that in Neder, the jury was presented with all of the evidence, and the issue of materiality was uncontested. Neder, 527 U.S. at 15, 119 S. Ct. at 1836. The Supreme Court held this was trial error, reviewable under a harmless error analysis. Id.

¶111 The present cases are different. Unlike Neder, the error in these cases did not occur during the presentation of the case to the jury. Instead, the error was the complete absence of the jury during the penalty phase of the trial. The jury in Ring's trial heard no evidence, nor was it asked to make findings of any kind on the aggravating circumstances of the crime. And, even if such evidence may have been introduced at the guilt phase, it was not considered by a jury in the context of the death penalty. As a consequence, a jury verdict was never returned in these cases on the greater offense of capital murder. Thus, there is simply "no object, so to speak, upon which harmless-error scrutiny can operate." Sullivan, 508 U.S. at 280, 113 S. Ct. at 2082.

¶112 To apply harmless error review in these consolidated cases would encourage the court to speculate that reversal is not necessary because the non-existent jury would have convicted the defendant in any event. The court, in other words, would transform itself into a phantom jury. The argument is not supportable.

¶113 In these consolidated cases, the majority must concede that the jury was erroneously discharged before the trial was completed. If this permits harmless error review, then, one must suppose, we would also review for harmless error if the trial judge directed a verdict for the state on one or more elements of the charge, granted summary judgment on an element, or discharged the jury after it had determined some but not all of the charges. Such results are also unsupportable, in my view. "The Sixth Amendment requires more than appellate speculation about a hypothetical jury's action, or else directed verdicts for the State would be sustainable on appeal; it requires an actual jury finding of guilty." Id.

¶114 Today's opinion puts the majority in the position of speculating about one of the great unknowables — what a nonexistent jury would have done. We might argue about whether some or any degree of accuracy can be obtained by such speculation, but the argument is irrelevant. Both the state and federal constitutions guarantee defendants the right to trial by jury — not for one-half of the trial, not for two-thirds, fourfifths, or nine-tenths of the trial but for the whole trial. When the jury trial guarantee is violated, I believe structural error has occurred. The Constitution does not then permit judges to conclude the error was harmless; it requires the court to conclude that the trial mechanism violated the Constitution and the result should not be affirmed.
